More Votes for Smith
Than for Hoover

Outagamie-co joined the nationwide landslide which carried Herbert Hoover into the White House on the crest of an avalanche of votes under which was buried Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York.

The Republican candidate was given 14,163 votes in the county's 48 precincts, while Smith received 12,905, a plurality of 1,258 for the president-elect.

Mr. Hoover was enabled to carry Outagamie-co by the huge plurality given him in the city of Appleton. He carried Appleton by 1,787 votes, thereby wiping out the lead of 529 which Mr. Smith piled up outside the city mostly in the Democrat strongholds in the southeast corner of the county. Hoover received 6,580 votes in Appleton and Smith was given 4,793.

The vote cast for the presidential nominees was the largest ever recorded in the history of the county. A total of 27,068 voters registered preferences for Smith or Hoover and there were about 100 votes for Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate, making a total of 27,168 votes at the polls on Tuesday.

The vote in Appleton was not quite up to expectations resulting from announcements that registrations exceeded 13,000. Only 11,373 ballots were cast for Smith and Hoover, but this figure is far in excess of the largest vote ever recorded heretofore.

Hoover overwhelmed his Democrat opponent in the First ward, sweeping both precincts and he had impressive lead in the Sixth ward. One of the surprises of the election was the Republican's strength in the Fifth ward which he carried by a narrow margin. The Third and Fourth wards went to Smith.

In Little Chute, where a record vote was polled, Smith received 1,058 votes and Hoover got 46. This went strong in Kaukauna which he carried by more than 600 votes and he ran ahead of his opponent in the Kaukauna by 34 votes and she was ahead of Miss Ziegenhagen in two of the city's six wards. She carried most of the Democrat precincts of the county but failed to make an impression in the Ziegenhagen vote in the strong Republican centers.

Sydney Shannon had an easy time winning from Archie Crevier. Kaukauna, in the contest for clerk of the courts, leading his opponent by 4,400 votes and heading the county ticket of contested offices. Crevier carried his home city by only about 225 votes and he carried only the Third and Fourth wards in Appleton. Shannon was far ahead in both city and county precincts.

Dr. H. E. Ellsworth ran far ahead of Dr. W. C. Felton for coroner, carrying city and county. The vote was: Ellsworth 13,419, Felton 8,709.

John Hantschel, county clerk; A. G. Koch, register of deeds; O. Schmiede, assessor; and F. M. Charlesworth, surveyor, were unopposed for reelection.

HOOVER ANSWERS WIRE FROM GOVERNOR SMITH

Hoover Home, Stanford University Campus, Cal. (AP)—President-elect Herbert Hoover Wednesday sent the following response to the congratulatory telegram sent to him Tuesday night by his Democratic opponent, Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

"I am in receipt of your kind telegram. I deeply appreciate both the spirit of it and your good wishes for the future."

MILWAUKEE COPS HUNT DRIVER OF DEATH CAR

Milwaukee (AP)—Milwaukee's police force was out in full strength Wednesday in a search for the hit and run driver who late Tuesday fatally crushed Edward Kohler, 4, at an intersection here. Authorities have a good description of the machine and every officer in the city was ordered to be on the lookout for it.

Edward was accompanied by his brother Robert, 5, at the time of the accident. The victim was rushed to the hospital where he was pronounced dead on entrance.

GIESE WINS SHERIFF JOB BY 971 VOTES

Staidl Runs Far Ahead of Rooney for Election as District Attorney

Two new officers will go on the county payroll next Jan. 1 as a result of Tuesday's election. They are Frederick W. Giese, elected sheriff over Martin Verhagen by 971 votes, and Stanley Staidl who defeated F. J. Rooney for election as district attorney. Mr. Staidl received 13,051 votes and Rooney was given 10,312. More than 25,000 votes were cast for sheriff, Giese getting 12,992 and Verhagen 12,021.

Verhagen ran about 1,000 votes ahead of Giese outside of Appleton but was swamped in the city where the winner picked up a lead of 2,100, much of it contributed by the First and Sixth wards, with the Second and Fifth going more than a little. Verhagen carried the Third and Fourth wards, was given a huge majority in Little Chute and Kimberly and ran ahead of his opponent in other Democrat precincts. His lead in those communities far offset Giese's lead in the northern and western part of the county with the result that he was more than a 1,000 votes ahead of his opponent when they came into Appleton.

Staidl, on the other hand, carried both county and city, but his lead in the city was considerably greater than his plurality in the county. Rooney ran strong in Little Chute, Buchanan, Kimberly and Vandenberg but lost the city of Kaukauna by almost 300 votes. Staidl carried four of the six wards in the city.

Miss Marie Ziegenhagen defeated Miss Della Schmitt, her Democrat opponent for county treasurer, carrying both city and county, although her city plurality was much larger than her lead in the county. Miss Ziegenhagen, the present treasurer led her opponent by almost 2,000 votes.

Miss Schmitt carried the city of Kaukauna by 34 votes and she was ahead of Miss Ziegenhagen in two of the city's six wards. She carried most of the Democrat precincts of the county but failed to make an impression in the Ziegenhagen vote in the strong Republican centers.

Sydney Shannon had an easy time winning from Archie Crevier. Kaukauna, in the contest for clerk of the courts, leading his opponent by 4,400 votes and heading the county ticket of contested offices. LaFollette Keeps His Prestige In Wisconsin

BY ERNEST C. H. KIRSCHEN
Associated Press Writer

That the name of La Follette is still one to conjure with in Wisconsin's politics was demonstrated Wednesday morning when the last returns from the election trickled in and showed that "Young Bob" had swept to one of the most impressive victories ever scored in this state. The youngest United States senator carried every county in the state by a tremendous margin over William H. Markham of Horton, Conservative Independent Republican candidate.

The magnitude of Senator LaFollette's victory became perceptible early Tuesday night when, with returns in from only 300 of the state's 4327 precincts, State Senator Markham, his chief opponent, conceded him the election. With 1,603 precincts heard from, the LaFollette vote totaled 241,612 against 123,932 for Markham and 2,258 for David W. Emmerson, candidate of the Prohibition party.

These returns from one-third of Wisconsin's precincts gave "Young Bob" a larger vote than he polled in

Expect Republican Lead Of 100,000 In Wisconsin

BY DONALD C. BOLLES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Milwaukee (AP)—Back into the Republican column from which it has been absent when a new president was named only three times since the Civil war, Wisconsin contributed 13 electoral votes towards election of Herbert Hoover.

Bowling over the opposition which included Senator John J. Blaine and many other prominent Progressive Republicans leaders, the Republican party rolled up a majority expected to exceed 100,000 in a gigantic vote that broke all records for Wisconsin.

In his successful campaign for the presidency, Herbert Hoover was given the greatest popular vote a candidate for president has received in Wisconsin although his margin of victory did not approach that of Senator LaFollette in 1924 or Warren G. Harding in 1920. In losing to his Republican opponent Governor Alfred Smith made the strongest run of a Democratic candidate in the history of Wisconsin. Although he carried only 11 out of 42 counties.

TEXAS APPEARS SAFE IN HOOVER COLUMN

Dallas, Tex. (AP)—The threatened revolt within the Democratic ranks of this previously rock-ribbed Democratic state, scoffed at by party leaders before Tuesday's election, was a grim reality Wednesday. Party stalwarts awoke to find Herbert Hoover leading the way for the state's 20 electoral votes, which never have been cast for any but a Democratic candidate.

With Tuesday's unprecedented election vote more than two-thirds tabulated early Wednesday by the Texas election bureau, the Republican nominee led Governor Smith by 8,141 votes, Hoover's total was 235,926, Smith's 224,775.

After a night of doubt, during which the ultimate success could not be guessed at, the final figures were Smith 118,841, Hoover 117,458. It was not until the vote of 194 of the state's 195 precincts had been completed at 4:40 Wednesday morning that Smith ran a lead of 2,725 votes over Herbert Hoover, a lead which the latter cut down but could not erase.

950,000 AT POLLS

All records were shattered into the discard through the great outpouring of approximately 950,000 men and women in Wisconsin whose voting made the result closer to the sentiment of the majority of the residents of the state than has ever been recorded. The 940,000 mark which was based on the nearly complete returns, showed an increase on 1916 over 1924 when 840,000 votes were recorded.

Describing the Republican party in its support of its native son Senator Herbert H. LaFollette in his independent candidacy, Wisconsin returned to the fold Tuesday with a stride that early spoiled the hopes of a Democratic Progressive coalition to sweep it into the Smith fold.

WINS OFFICE BY BIG LEAD OVER RIVAL

Other State Officers Are Re-elected in Republican Triumph Tuesday

Milwaukee (AP)—Walter J. Kohler, a Republican and supporter of Herbert Hoover, is the governor-elect of Wisconsin.

Eight months ago unknown to the political life of the state except in a very modest way, Mr. Kohler was swept into the office of the state's chief executive Tuesday by a majority over Mayor Albert G. Schmiedeman, his Democratic opponent, that will exceed 100,000.

Along with him on the crest of the Republican landslide that swept the nation went the Progressive Republicans who won in the primary in their quest of another term.

They are Lieutenant Governor Henry A. Huber, Attorney General John W. Reynolds, State Treasurer Solomon Levitan, and Secretary of State Theodore Dammann. They apparently won by a 2-1 vote.

Mr. Kohler will take office Jan. 1, 1929, for the next biennium as the twenty-sixth governor of Wisconsin. He will succeed Fred E. Zimmerman, who was denied nomination for reelection when he and Representative Joseph D. Beck, Progressive Republican were defeated in the September primary by Mr. Kohler.

Mr. Kohler thereby becomes the first governor of the state since Emanuel L. Phillips was governor of the commonwealth, who has not been a follower of the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette.

Centralia, Ill. (AP)—Two trainmen were killed and two other trainmen and a passenger were slightly injured at 3:32 Wednesday morning when the Illinois Central's Panama limited, northbound, struck a small oil mill south of here.

Those killed were Fred E. Eberling, engineer, and George Lang, fireman, both of Centralia. Charles Thompson, flagman, suffered a wrenched neck. A negro Pullman porter was the other trainman hurt. Several passengers were shaken.

The Illinois Central yardmaster said the engineer apparently failed to see signals which had been set against the approaching train by the crew of a Burlington freight train which had just crossed the Illinois Central tracks.

Marked Change In Herb With News Of Victory

Hoover Home, Stanford University Campus, Cal. (AP)—Herbert Hoover, in victory is almost as quiet as he was in the midst of his drive for presidency, but the assurance of success has brought him a new air of ease, a new sense of relaxation from the job completed, together with an acknowledgment of his powers for the first time.

As the tense hours passed that were to decide his place in the country's history, whether he would mold it as the next in the long line of presidents, or only share in it with his hundred million fellow citizens, a marked change came over him.

"He's a different man now from early in the evening," said Prof. E. B. Marx, in whose classes Hoover began his study of civil government at the new president-elect, moved among his crowding guests a peace assurance in the lift of his head and the square of his shoulders. Marx watched him with understanding eyes just as years ago he had watched Herbert Hoover, the struggling student.

Early in the evening he went on when the first reports from New York and Connecticut were coming in, he was saying "Well, it's going to be pretty close." Now see how placid and sure he is.

Republicans Capture Substantial Majorities in Senate and House

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Substantial Republican majorities in both the senate and house were rolling in Wednesday behind the tide of Hoover votes.

In the senate where they now have only a plurality of one, the Republicans have captured six seats now held by Democrats, and have apparently held on to all of their own 13 at stake in Tuesday's election.

The Hoover wave in Kentucky carried with it nine Republican members of the house of that state's representation of 11, and 6 of these Republicans replace Democrats. However, other defections in the Democratic south in the presidential contest failed to make material shift in the normal representation of these states in the house. So the present majority of 57 so far is little more than the margin given them by Kentucky.

4 SENATORS LOSE

Four Democratic senators along the Atlantic seaboard were bowled over—Bayard of Delaware; Bruce of Maryland; Gerry of Rhode Island; and Edwards of New Jersey. Two other seats now held by Democrats went to Republicans. The veteran

League of Nations Members Believe It Paves Way for U. S. Cooperation

Geneva, Switzerland (AP)—American cooperation in international affairs, including the activities of the league of nations is what the league looks for under the presidency of Herbert Hoover. Officials here are of the belief that Mr. Hoover realizes from hard experience the interdependence of nations and the need of international collaboration.

The same officials emphasized Mr. Hoover's declaration in his acceptance speech that though the United States had declined membership in the league, it would be glad to cooperate in the league's endeavors to promote scientific, economic and social welfare and secure the limitation of armaments, which they consider the widest classification of the American attitude toward the league ever pronounced by an American official.

Through Mr. Hoover's influence the United States has participated in numerous league economic conferences, and the collaboration it is expected will be extended as the league now is faced with a heavy economic and financial program in connection with world economic and financial readjustment.

New York State Crushes Smith Hopes by Giving 45 Electoral Votes to Foe

BULLETIN

New York (AP)—Herbert Hoover's margin of victory over Gov. Alfred E. Smith in the contest for New York's 45 electoral votes was approximately 110,000. With returns at hand from all except 182 of the election districts in the state, the actual Hoover plurality was 86,354. All the missing districts were in rural territory. It was expected that the Hoover majority would be increased by 25,000 when the unreported districts were heard from.

Tyrannical majorities Wednesday were disclosing the full measure of the Hoover sweep in the election.

With a substantial bloc of returns calculated in every state, the Republican national ticket was leading at 11 o'clock in 40 states, casting a collective total of 444 electoral votes.

The eight states held by Smith were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, having amongst them 87 electoral votes.

The state majorities established in these two groups were with a few exceptions, steadily growing. Massachusetts in the Smith group, however and Texas and North Carolina in the Hoover group, continued to swing near an even division. Many still were to be counted.

Returned from the congressional elections also were far from complete, but it was apparent that the swing to Hoover had carried into office increased majorities in both senate and house.

A Republican sweep from coast to coast, enveloping the border states and driving a wedge into the solid south, still was piling up majorities for Herbert Hoover Wednesday as the story of Tuesday's expanding detail of the story of Tuesday's election.

As the figures stood Wednesday morning, with many votes still to be counted, about four-fifths of the states carrying nearly the same proportion of the electoral college, had either toppled into the Republican column or were showing substantial evidence of doing so.

TEACH CHILDREN TO THINK SAFETY, SPEAKER DECLARES

Auto Club Representative Says Boy Patrols Decrease School Accidents

"People are not safety minded, and we must teach our public school children to think in terms of safety," said V. F. Pettie of the Wisconsin State Automobile association, in an address before members of the First Ward Parent-Teachers association at the school Monday evening. The meeting was attended by about 75 parents and teachers.

Mr. Pettie explained the purpose of the Wisconsin automobile association, which is one of 1,500 clubs which make up the national automobile association, and told of the association's work in promoting safety among school children. He stated that most accidents among school children occur between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon and that it is usually because there is no supervision of school children immediately following school hours. For this reason, he said, the automobile club is making an attempt to promote safety instruction in the schools, chiefly through the organization of the school boy patrols.

He explained the organization of the patrols, pointing out that junior police badges and white belts would be furnished by the club, and that free tickets to theatres in Appleton would be given the boys. He also stated that motorists who do not heed the traffic directions of junior patrol boys would be prosecuted by the legal department of the association.

Mr. Pettie concluded his speech with the statement that Police Chief George T. Prm is giving his hearty support to the boy patrol project in Appleton, and that the boys of all the schools are eager to get organized.

Mr. Pettie spoke at the Parent-Teachers meeting through the cooperation of A. H. Thuerer, chairman of the program committee, and A. G. Adrian, secretary of the local branch of the Wisconsin Automobile association.

Mrs. Caroline Boettcher, accompanied at the piano by her mother, played a cello solo during the evening.

The next meeting of the organization will be a joint meeting with the Roosevelt Junior High school group and the rural Parent-Teachers associations, at the invitation of A. L. Meating, county superintendent, and A. G. Oosterhouse of the Roosevelt school.

HOOVER VOTE IS GREATEST EVER WON IN AMERICA

Late Returns Indicate That Republican Has Carried Total of 40 States

umman after giving Smith the edge on the early returns.

Only in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, outside the south, did the balance show signs of tilting in Smith's favor as the totals mounted throughout the night. Even if both of these two New England states were to wind up with Democratic majorities and Smith held only the southern states in which he had established substantial leads—Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina—Hoover's electoral college vote would be 444 out of the total 531.

No such high-water mark ever has been reached in any previous presidential election. Even in 1912, when the Republican strength was at its peak, Art and Roosevelt, Wilson had only 435. Harding had 404 in the sweep of 1920, and Coolidge 382 four years ago.

LARGE SPLIT VOTE

The very wide prevalence of the split ballot was apparent in the fact that many of the states which were rolling up Hoover majorities Wednesday still were keeping Democratic candidates for governor and senator in the lead.

One of the great surprises for the Democrats—and there were many of them in the combined returns of 48 states—was the strength developed by Hoover in the cities. It was in the great centers of population that Smith had expected to run away with majorities the country could not overturn. In a dozen of the larger cities he had been accorded popular receptions of a magnitude difficult to match in American political history. But when the test came the city vote did not flock to him.

NEW YORK FAILS AL

Even in New York city, the home of Tammany hall and the great rock of Smith's strength in all of his campaigns for the governorship, his plurality Tuesday was, in round numbers 430,000. Before hand, his managers had predicted it would be around 600,000. Neither did the Smith vote in Chicago, Baltimore, Cleveland, St. Louis or Philadelphia take on the Smith ratio predicted for it, although in Boston, probably the scene of the nominee's greatest reception during the campaign, he received a tremendous tribute at the ballot box.

What the election may mean for the future of the two party organizations is a question of great speculation among party chiefs. The great Hoover vote in the south, following on the reorganization of the Republican party is most of the southern states, leaves for that party an open question of how far it will go in its endeavor to maintain a two-party basis south of the Mason-Dixon line. Many thousands of those who voted against Smith continued to profess their allegiance to the Democratic party, and whether any considerable number of them can be permanently brought within the ranks of a rejuvenated Republican party in the south remains for the coming months to determine.

PARTY DISHEARTENED

On the Democratic side lies the whole question of what can be done to rejuvenate a party which took the punishment it suffered Tuesday. Out of ten of two previous crushing defeats in the Republican landslides of 1920 and 1924. Wrapped up in this problem is the question of Gov. Smith's continued leadership. That leadership was opposed at the Houston convention by many wheelhorses of that same solid south on which the party had depended for years to provide the next crop of sure Democratic strength in a national election. After the nomination was made, many of these wheelhorses turned out and worked for the ticket. Others did not. Governor Moody of Texas gave an indication of a possible term to come when he declared Tuesday night that the result of this election was attributable to the methods injected into the campaign by Chairman Raskob, Smith's friend and personal choice as a campaign manager.

These are problems which will be months and perhaps years in the

A celebration that will harken back to Nov. 11 and 12, 1918, when the Armistice was signed, has been planned by members of Oney Johnston post of the American Legion, Civil and Spanish American war veterans, members of Co. D, 127th infantry, the 120th field artillery band, city and county officers and members of the executive committee of the Outagamie-co defense council for Monday evening, Nov. 12.

The festivities will begin with a banquet and program starting at 6:30 at Rainbow Gardens. The dinner and program is for men only, and after it is over, the floor will be cleared and dancing will be in order for the remainder of the evening. Reports at the meeting of post members Monday evening at the Elk club was that 100 reservations already have been made for the dinner.

The evening's program will open with singing of America and will be followed by invocation by Oney Johnston post chaplain, Capt. James DeFord of the Salvation Army. Several numbers then will be played by the band and the vets will journey back to camp and war days and again sing war time songs.

The address of greeting to guests of the post will be given by Herb Heible and will be followed by a minute's address of response. There will be a full hour about 10 minutes in the midst of the celebration during which the vets will pay tribute to their buddy dead. During the time an appropriate pantomime will be staged by students of the F. J. Bannister dancing academy.

WHALEY WILL SPEAK

The main address of the evening will be given by Vilus H. Whaley, past state commander. James D. Balliet, post commander will be master of ceremonies and will have a report on membership activities to read. Carnival features such as hats and noise makers will be given every person attending the dinner.

Special arrangements are being made to take Civil War veterans to the Gardens. Legionnaires will call for the men in cars while other persons who need transportation have been asked to be at the Elk club not later than 6:15. Cars will be there to convey them.

Legionnaires in charge of the celebration are James D. Balliet, invitational George Lane, the pantomime; John E. Hantschel, the dinner. The ladies auxiliary of the legion will serve the meal. Eric L. Madison, Herb Heible and John E. Hantschel are on the general committee arranging for the celebration.

More than 300 members of the post have signed for next year, according to reports at the general meeting Monday night. Less Smith, one of the vice commanders, has personally accounted for 50 renewals of membership. The interest shown by Oney Johnston members in the drive is the primary reason the ninth district leads the state in the membership campaign, Marshall C. Graff, district commander, told the men.

McNUTT WANT COVE

The post has received a letter from Paul V. McNutt, newly elected national commander in which he regrets he was not able to fill the armistice speaking engagement here as he had promised several months ago. Commander McNutt informed the local post he expects to spend part of his time in this state next spring and would be willing to address local members at that time. If a convenient date can be arranged in the spring a Fox river valley legion rally will be held here with Commander McNutt the principal speaker.

Several members of the local post soon will be appointed a committee to carry on work with the local scout troop. The request for the committee was made by M. G. Clark, valley scout executive on behalf of Ted Frank recently appointed troop scoutmaster.

BUILDING PERMITS

Five building permits were issued Monday by John M. Welland, building inspector. They were granted to Joseph Baurain for a garage at 1507 W. Winnebago-st at a cost of $150; Riverside Green house for storage shed at 1236 N. Leminah-st at a cost of $150; and to Fred Calmes for a garage at 930 W. Third-st at a cost of $250. Other permits were granted to Theodore Utchig for a residence and garage at 1003 W. Lorain-st at a cost of $6,000 and to Ted Bruhake for building a garage at Garfield Place at a cost of $250.

PUBLIC WORKS BOARD MEETS THIS AFTERNOON

The Board of Public works met at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon in the city council chambers to open bids for the E. Wisconsin-ave subway and new police and street department cars. Bids on the subway closed at 10 o'clock and six were submitted, according to Carl Reicher, city clerk. The bids were accompanied by certified checks of 5 per cent of the total cost of construction and some of them were for parts of the work only.

NEW HAMPSHIRE STAYS IN REPUBLICAN RANKS

Concord, N. H.—(AP)—New Hampshire remained in the Republican column by a comfortable margin, tabulation of the vote showed Wednesday. The plurality of approximately 55,000 given Herbert Hoover, the Republican party's nominee, exceeded by about 7,000 that of Governor Charles W. T. by the Republican candidate for governor of the state.

solving. Today, Republican leaders the country over were too pleased at the mounting Hoover totals to give much thought to what is to be done tomorrow, and the Democrats too stunned to turn their attentions very far into the future.

The New Sheriff

Frederick W. Giese, a newcomer in Outagamie-co politics will succeed Otto Zuehlke as sheriff on Jan. 1 by virtue of his victory over Martin Verhagen, Kimberly, Democrat on Tuesday. Mr. Giese's big vote in Appleton swept him into office.

Mr. Giese spent his boyhood days in Manitowoc-co. He served during the Santiago campaign in the Spanish American war and has been a resident of Outagamie-co for nine years. He was engaged in the fur-trade business in the city of Appleton.

KOHLER IS NEXT BADGER GOVERNOR

Madison, made a strong race but was snowed under in the great avalanche of Republican votes that swept Wisconsin.

Schmedeman drew strong support from old Democratic counties along the lake shore and several others, in which Governor Smith, the other half of the "Al and Al" team conceived by the Democrats also gained good majorities but lost in a like manner. Schmedeman carried Milwaukee-co. by about 7,000 but with Smith lost one Progressive Republican county after another, upon which they had counted either to hold even or gain some additional votes over Kohler.

The Milwaukee-co. result was a complete reversal of the primary when the majority of 18,000 given Kohler virtually assured his nomination which he won by 21,000. While he failed to gain but one-fourth of the margin achieved by Governor Smith, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate suffered from the same great majorities for the Republican candidate in the first congressional district. In the five counties in the district Kohler carried the astounding margin of 37,000. He received 12,000 more than Schmedeman in Rock and Racine-cos, 6,000 more in Walworth-co, but gained an edge by the narrow margin of 1,000 in Kenosha-co.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTIES

Upon the face of incomplete returns from some counties Schmedeman has apparently carried the only 12 with the rest going to Kohler. Schmedeman counties outside Milwaukee, were Ashland, Brown, Calumet, Chippewa, Crawford, Dane, Dodge, Kewaunee, Manitowoc, Marathon Ozaukee.

Fuel conservation will be discussed at a meeting of Chicago and Northwestern railroad officials at Northland hotel, Green Bay, at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, according to W. E. Basing, line agent who expects to attend the meeting with W. W. Frandenburg, local yardmaster. It is expected most of the officials of the Lake Shore division and throughout the valley will be present. A dinner will be served at the hotel at 12 o'clock, at which time a round table discussion will be held.

COMMITTEE PREPARES REPORT FOR BOARD

Members of the buildings and grounds committee of the county board met at the courthouse Monday afternoon and made preparations for its annual report to the county board which meets next week. The committee allowed bills and then took an inspection trip to the county work-house.

district, the bulkwork in past elections that successfully withstood the attack of Progressives, the counties of the state, including many LaFollette strongholds far offset the majority of approximately 45,000 which Smith gained in 14 counties.

This margin gained from Milwaukee and 10 others which with two exceptions in the halcyon days of the Democratic party before the war regularly showed their allegiance to it, was wiped out by the majorities gained by Hoover in the rest of the state. This failure to carry only 14 counties was a bitter disappointment to the Smith forces whose leader, Cito Labadie, had counted upon the Democratic candidate holding Hoover even in the rest of the state.

Smith carried Brown, Calumet, Fond du Lac, Iron, Kewaunee, Langlade, Manitowoc, Marathon, Milwaukee, Ozaukee and Washington, but lost Sheboygan, and upon which they had counted, by a narrow margin. All were Democratic 10 years ago except Fond du Lac, and then the only extreme southern county the Democratic candidate had the edge.

In surveying the state by congressional districts Hoover apparently gained wide margins in all but the fourth and fifth, Milwaukee districts and the ninth where the majority of 6,000 gained by Smith in Brown-co. in which Green Bay is situated, carried into the Democratic column.

INTENSE INTEREST

The intense interest aroused by the most spirited campaign Wisconsin, accustomed to lively political scraps, has seen in many years was reflected in the record smashing vote. That was responsible for the ease with which previous high marks for total vote and the greatest vote given the Republican and presidential candidates went by the boards.

A comparison with the past gives a conception of what took place. With an anticipated vote of 940,000 in Wisconsin, the total would exceed by 120,000 the vote in the 1924 election that presented the LaFollette-Coolidge-Davis triangular contest. It was approximately 50 per cent greater than the 1920 contest that gave Harding the state in a landslide. Those were the previous high marks in the state.

In carrying the state with the greatest popular vote ever accorded a presidential candidate in Wisconsin, Hoover surpassed the popular vote of both Coolidge and LaFollette in 1924 and it appeared possible that he would outdistance Harding who had 493,376 in 1920.

In 1924 the vote total LaFollette 453,678; Coolidge 311,814 and Davis 68,115. The 1920 vote was Harding 493,576 and Cox 113,422.

A glance at the figures of the past shows the phenomenal run made by Governor Smith, in his vain effort to do what only Cleveland in 1892, and Wilson in 1912 had been able to do—divorce the state from its allegiance to the Republican party in a presidential election and swing it for the Democratic party.

His vote was six times greater than John W. Davis had in 1924; and three times that of James A. Cox, in 1920.

In all the history of presidential elections in Wisconsin Smith's vote, although 100,000 behind Herbert Hoover, was only surpassed by Senator LaFollette in 1924 and Harding in 1920.

350 HEAR ELECTION RETURNS AT Y. M. C. A.

Approximately 350 people heard election returns in the Y. M. C. A. lobby from 7 o'clock Tuesday evening until 1:30 Wednesday morning, according to G. F. Werner, general secretary. Returns were received by special Western Union telegram service and radio. The election procedures were explained and conducted by F. M. Ingler. Mr. Ingler compared the 1928 election with that of the previous presidential race. Lunch was served by the cafeteria staff.

BREAD PRICE IS REDUCED 1 CENT

Decrease Is Made Possible Through Cooperation of Local Bakers

The Service Stores of Appleton decided to reduce the price of bread at one cent at their regular meeting at the Griesbach and Bosch grocery store, N. Richmond-st, Tuesday evening. The drop in price was made possible through the cooperation of Appleton bakers, who reduced the wholesale price of bread by one cent. Eight representatives of service stores attended the meeting.

G. O. P. CONTROLS NEXT CONGRESS

Republican representative, Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, was elected to the place now held by a Democrat, Cyrus Locher. The senate membership voluntarily relinquished by the Democratic warrior, James A. Reed of Missouri, has gone to a Republican. Senator Neely, Democrat, of West Virginia, is lagging behind his Republican opponent, and Senator Kendrick, Democrat, of Wyoming, and Dill, Democrat, of Washington, have real battle on their hands but are leading.

Senator Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, the lone Farmer-Labor member, and all of the Independent bloc of three Republicans and two Democrats are leading. They are LaFollette, Frazier, Howell, Wheeler, and Dill.

Democrats were taking as well as giving, however, in the house. They took one of Philadelphia's prize Republican districts in defeating James M. Beck, former solicitor general, a Republican from the First Pennsylvania district. They sent a Democrat, Harry Baker, to succeed the late Martin Madden, stalwart Republican, from the First Illinois district. Baker defeated Oscar de Priest, a Negro Republican candidate. Jeremiah E. O'Connell, a Democrat, took the post of Representative Monast of Rhode Island, and Louis Ludlow, a Washington newspaperman, upset normally Republican Indianapolis to defeat his Republican opponent, Representative Urdike.

Claus Timm, 1855 S. Oneida-st, returned Monday from a trip through Germany and Switzerland. Mr. Timm visited relatives while abroad. The trip marked his 13th crossing of the Atlantic ocean. He made the trip six times during the past few years and originally came to this country from Germany.

PUBLIC HEARING ON APARTMENT HOUSE IS SCHEDULED TONIGHT

Hearing Will Be Held in Conjunction With Meeting of Common Council

A public hearing will be held at the city council chambers at 7:30 Wednesday evening at which time the permit for building and apartment house at the northwest corner of S. Durkee and E. Lawrence-sts will be discussed. The hearing will be held in conjunction with the regular meeting of the council and the public is invited to attend, according to Mayor A. C. Rule.

Another important issue of the meeting will be the Wisconsin-ave subway. The referendum will probably receive more attention because of the decision made by Appleton voters at the polls, Tuesday, when the issue was favored by 241 votes. It is expected the question will receive special attention because of the stand of several aldermen who may change their previous opinions, according to Mayor Rule.

"I was previously opposed to the subway issue because I sincerely felt that the cost was too much of a burden for the people of Appleton and I didn't care to have all of the responsibility on my own shoulders," he said. "Since the people have voiced their opinion favoring the issue, I will do all in my power to see that the job is properly executed."

The council also will act in regard to the purchase of a new police car and new street department trucks. Bids for the trucks closed at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Other regular business matters also will be transacted.

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Two marriage licenses were issued Wednesday by John E. Hantschel, county clerk. They were given to: Anton Van Lieshout, Appleton, and Susan Lamers, route 6, Appleton; Harvey Phillips and Iva Mallett, Bear Creek.

Dr. Panneke is the Appleton delegate from the Northeastern district. Other delegates are Dr. P. J. Murphy of Green Bay and Dr. J. Stark of Seymour.

About 500 chiropractors are expected to attend the meeting. Principal speakers will be Mayor A. G. Schmedeman of Madison; Governor Fred R. Zimmerman; H. A. Schmidt, president of the Wisconsin Chiropractic association; Dr. C. E. Schilling, president of the Universal Riner of the Chiropractors Health bureau; Dr. F. E. Margolis, president of the American Chiropractors association; Dr. H. E. Hendar, dean of the Palmer School of Chiropractic and Dr. C. E. Schulze, president of the National College of Chiropractic.

4,500 HUNTING
LICENSES ISSUEDMore Than 300 Trappers
Have Taken Out Permits,
Clerk Reports

Neenah—A total of 4,500 hunting licenses have been issued in Winnebago co. to date, according to a report made Tuesday by George Mangel, county clerk. More than 300 trappers have secured licenses and tags for a total of 15,000 traps. This means there are more persons hunting and trapping this year than in any previous season, the clerk declares.

Mr. Mangel called attention to the fact that though game is growing less plentiful each year, the number of persons hunting and trapping is increasing leaps and bounds. This state of affairs, he claimed, will be caused for more drastic prohibitory legislation to protect game until the time will come when very little hunting will be allowed even at this time of the year.

"The season is now open in Winnebago co. for such game as mink, muskrat, racoon, squirrels, rabbits and skunks. There will also be an open season for deer this year in certain counties in the northern part of the state. This season is from Dec. 1 to Dec. 10. Each hunter is allowed to kill and take home one buck deer, not less than one year old.

The new boiler plant is surrounded by a 165-foot chimney from which the first smoke will emit Monday. Steam generated in the boilers is delivered to a 2,500 K. NEW VICE PRESIDENT BORN IN CABIN ON INDIAN RESERVATION

Charles Curtis Spent Boyhood With Indians from Whom He Descended

BY LESTER POSVAR
Topeka, Kas.—(P)—From a cradle in a log cabin to the vice president's chair in the United States senate.

Such is the brief life story of Charles Curtis, when next March 4, he becomes the presiding officer of the legislative body in which he has served for 20 years.

After holding public office almost continuously since the age of 24, the Kansas senator will begin at 69 to serve as vice president.

The man who has worn the toga so long wrapped himself in an Indian credence when he was a boy. He was born in a log cabin on the Kaw reservation in Kansas January 25, 1896. His birthplace was on the site

Life Sketch of Charles Curtis

1896—Born on a farm near North Topeka, Kas., of part Indian ancestry.

1898—Orphaned, he went to live with relatives on an Indian reservation in Morris county, Kansas.

1898—Went to Topeka to live with his father's people.

1899—Attended school, working in livery stables in spare time.

1899—Signed a contract as a jockey on Kansas tracks.

1899—Quit riding and returned to school to get an education.

1899—Admitted to the bar after studying law.

1899—Made prosecutor of Shawnee county and won fame by enforcing Kansas prohibition law.

1899—Elected to Congress on the Republican ticket.

1900—Left Congress to run for the Senate, but was defeated.

1900—Succeeded in aspirations and won election to the Senate.

1900—Defeated in campaign for re-election.

1900—Returned to the Senate.

1900—Became Republican leader of the Senate.

1900—Elected vice-president.

of Topeka and his birth preceded by a year the admission of Kansas into the union.

His great-great grandfather had been Chief White Plume of the Kaws, who was the grandson of Chief Pawhuska of the Osages. His mother was Ellen Pappan, one-fourth Indian and three-fourths French, and his father was Capt. Orren Curtis, a Yankee of Puritan stock.

While Captain Curtis was away, fighting for the union, his wife died and their 3-year-old son remained on the Kaw reservation with his Indian grandmother.

When eight years old, the boy was the hero of a spectacular deed that perhaps saved many Kaws from scalping by the blood-thirsty Cheyennes, but took him away from his mother's people. The Cheyennes went on the warpath in 1868, vowing to destroy all white settlers and all Indians friendly to the whites.

They surrounded the Kaw reservation, which was then near Council Grove, Kas., and the besieged Indians selected the great-great-grandson of Chief White Plume to try to ship past the Cheyennes with a message to white soldiers stationed at Topeka.

The son of the Union army officer was successful with the only military mission of his life and the Kaws were rescued. But the boy remained in Topeka with his father and white grandmother. He sold apples and peanuts at a railroad station and attended school for a few months in the winters.

When he was 14, he heard that the Kaws were to be moved again, this time from the state named after the tribe to Indian territory, now Oklahoma. He hurried back to his grandmother Pappan, and told her he would accompany her to the new home in the direction of the noon-day sun.

Her grandson the future of red men was as uncertain as their present was unhappy, and she urged him to stay with his father's people.

So Charley returned to his grandmother Curtis. But among the white settlers of early Kansas, nearly every boy had to work for a living. Charley disliked the job of vending apples, and the riding of horses was more fitting to his Indian nature. He became a jockey and won many a race.

Later he drove a hack at night, while attending school in the day. He continued hack driving when he studied law in the office of A. H. Case.

At 21 he was admitted to the bar, becoming Case's partner, and three years later he was elected county attorney. During four years in this office he proved that the Kansas prohibition law could be enforced, and his fame as a prosecutor spread beyond the borders of Shawnee county.

In 1892, Curtis won a seat in the lower house of congress and held it until 1907 when he was elected United States senator. Four years ago he became the republican leader in the senate.

Curtis married Anna Baird of Topeka in 1884, a few days after he was elected to his first public office. She died in 1924. The senator has two daughters, Mrs. Webster Knight II, Providence, R. I., and Mrs. Charles P. George, Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and one son, Harry Curtis, a Chicago lawyer.

KOHLER PROMISES GOOD GOVERNMENT

Expresses Appreciation for Confidence Shown in Him by Voters

Kohler.—(P)—An expression of appreciation for the support received in the election and a promise to give Wisconsin the best administration of which he is capable was the substance of a statement made early Wednesday by Walter J. Kohler, next governor of Wisconsin.

"The election Tuesday has amply justified faith and confidence in the workings of democracy," the statement read. "It continued as follows: 'I predict that the next four years will see a record of achievement and progress in the national under the leadership of Herbert Hoover such as few nations have been privileged to experience in the past.'

"The great mass of citizens are clear thinking and discriminating. They have unequivocally expressed their faith in the Republican party and in the principles which I have enunciated during this campaign."

"I thank, with deepest appreciation, the hundreds of thousands of citizens in this state who have so fully expressed their confidence in me."

"Wisconsin in the future must be governed by humanitarianism and impartial facts. I shall give Wisconsin the best business administration on which I am capable, and look forward to carrying out a constructive program with the cooperation of the state officers and the legislature."

He discussed classifications, a subject which the class studied for its weekly lesson. Fifteen persons attended the class.

Recognition of the efforts of the traffic division of the chamber for its interest in the study class and of Roy G. Wort for his work in putting the project over, has been given by the American Railway association freight claim division. Mr. Wort recently received a letter from one of the association's special representatives advising him the association had been informed of the activity and would aid whenever possible.

MOODY HITS RASKOB AS SMITH'S MANAGER
Texas Governor Says South Gave Smith Vote as "Personal Tribute"

Austin, Tex.—(P)—John J. Raskob, the manager of the Democratic national campaign, was criticized in a statement issued here Wednesday by Governor Dan Moody, Democrat, which said that the popular vote given Smith was "a magnificent personal tribute and that the south is still solidly Democratic at heart."

"Unfortunately for Governor Smith and the Democrats the management of the campaign was entrusted to Mr. Raskob, a cynical commercialist with an alcoholic complex who has no conception of the attitude or ideals prevailing in the south or west. The statements which he persisted in issuing had a tendency to drive votes from the Democratic party which all the regular Democrats in the south could not overcome."

"The large popular vote which Governor Smith received is a magnificent personal tribute to him. He ran the race of a strong and sincere man. The people of the south voted their intense convictions on the prohibition question. The Republicans can take no heart in the vote their ticket received in the south, for the south in sentiment and feeling is still solidly Democratic. The next national election will reveal this as a fact."

MOODY HITS RASKOB AS SMITH'S MANAGER

Texas Governor Says South Gave Smith Vote as "Personal Tribute"

Austin, Tex.—(P)—John J. Raskob, the manager of the Democratic national campaign, was criticized in a statement issued here Wednesday by Governor Dan Moody, Democrat, which said that the popular vote given Smith was "a magnificent personal tribute and that the south is still solidly Democratic at heart."

"Unfortunately for Governor Smith and the Democrats the management of the campaign was entrusted to Mr. Raskob, a cynical commercialist with an alcoholic complex who has no conception of the attitude or ideals prevailing in the south or west. The statements which he persisted in issuing had a tendency to drive votes from the Democratic party which all the regular Democrats in the south could not overcome."

THE ELECTION

The predicted landslide for Hoover, which most conservative observers took with a grain of salt, came true. Mr. Hoover may have the largest majority in the electoral college of any president since the Civil war. At this writing it appears that he will exceed the Harding record of 1920. He has broken into the solid South. Smith's electoral vote may be below one hundred. Massachusetts is the only state in the Union of importance outside of the solid South to go for the New York governor. His own state turned against him. It seems a pity that he should not have the consolation of home loyalty, considering all he has done for his state, in the hour of this crushing defeat. But such is the way of politics.

Hoover's magnificent victory, which is almost too great to constitute a healthy political condition and may prove to be a handicap rather than an advantage to him when he takes office, will be interpreted in various ways and as due to many causes. Politicians will say with assurance it was this, that or the other thing which did it. But no analyst, however profound and discerning, can point to any one thing as responsible for the result.

Nevertheless, the direct causes stand out clearly. To what extent each was a factor no one can say. The liquor issue proved to be, as Mr. Hughes aptly described it, a sham battle. It cost Smith heavily both in the sympathy and support of the people. The election demonstrates to our mind that the country is overwhelmingly dry; that there is no sentiment anywhere except in almost negligible quantity for repeal of the 18th Amendment, and probably none for its modification. As the campaign is reviewed in retrospect, Smith's opposition to prohibition was his only chance to make a showing, and instead it turned out to be his Waterloo. Religion may be dismissed. It was not a material factor one way or the other. Catholics may or may not agree with this, but when the other forces are added to elect Hoover are given their proper place religion has to be eliminated.

The women contributed heavily to the phenomenal strength of the Republican candidate. Undoubtedly in a general way the women were for Hoover and against Smith. Prohibition played a part in this, but not all. Much of the preference went to the man himself, his views, his methods, his personality. The women thought in this campaign fully as much as the men, possibly more. On broad grounds both moralistic and idealistic Hoover appealed to them.

Smith's attempt to win the agricultural Mid-west was logically doomed to failure. The devices utilized to capitalize the farm revolt were too palpably devices, offering nothing tangible. Furthermore, it was going too far in credulity to expect the Mid-continent to put greater faith in Smith's ability to solve the farm problem than his opponent. Mr. Hoover's capacities in this field were manifestly superior, and the character of the man gave every assurance that he would succeed where Smith in all probability would fail.

Again on the important policy of waterway development Hoover's engineering skill, understanding of economics and reputation as a builder put him in a class by himself. Smith's waterway views were provincial and hazy. The mid-continent had everything to gain from Hoover and nothing to lose.

In the domain of foreign affairs, Hoover's experience and knowledge gave him every preference, in the conduct of both political and commercial relations. The country naturally would place more confidence in him for this important responsibility, which is even more direct than that touching legislation.

The water power controversy was a very small factor. In the appeal for votes we would say Smith had the edge here, although in soundness of doctrine, Mr. Hoover. As a matter of fact there was little real difference between the two on this question except by inference.

The part played by prosperity and the protective tariff may be over or under-estimated. In the background it unquestionably exercises a large influence, possibly the controlling so far as issues of policy went, and yet not so much in our judgment as the remarkable personality of the candidate himself. Hoover got to the people with compelling force. The outward demonstrations for Smith were more striking, but in the quiet reflection of the home it was different.

Smith's campaign strategy was effective—probably as effective as it could be with the "cards" against him. It may be that he overdid here and there to his detriment, but on the whole he conducted a brilliant and altogether worthy campaign. The most plausible of all his bids for support—denunciation of Republican scandals, mis-government and alliance with vested interests, appears to have fallen completely flat. That Gov. Smith endeared himself to countless thousands by his great fighting qualities, his daring challenges and his directness goes without saying. His supporters were more militant than those of Hoover. The campaign, disastrous as it was to his candidacy, is not at all to his discredit. On the contrary, it is very much to his credit and his honor. Even if the country disagrees with him on prohibition and certain other policies, it has the greatest respect and admiration for his high qualities of mind and heart, his sincerity and his crusading trait.

But masterful as was Gov. Smith's campaign, Mr. Hoover's was the more effective. He displayed a wonderfully accurate knowledge of popular psychology in determining and pursuing his course. It was one calculated from the very beginning to gain confidence and high esteem. He displayed singular ability in the preparation of his campaign document. Probably in no presidential campaign have they been of a higher quality. They appeal to the convictions, judgment and conscience of the nation with increasing and finally irresistible power. He was logical and orderly in everything he said. His record of past achievements was a guarantee that back of the words was the ability to perform. His speeches had the ring of truth and honesty, lacking entirely the political catch-phrases and buncombe to which the people are accustomed.

If Gov. Smith's campaign was well conducted, Mr. Hoover's was superlatively so. The real reason for this was because the latter appealed to the side of human nature that men and women more readily respond to when left to themselves. Seldom has a candidate for president been elected and seldom will one enter the White house with so extraordinary a demonstration of popular faith and good-will. It is a tribute of signal proportion. Probably, too, there never has been a president from whom so much is expected. His role is truly a difficult one, if he is to maintain his high initial prestige.

We cannot close this first comment upon the election without paying a further tribute to Gov. Smith. This is for the deep stimulus he has imparted to public interest in political affairs, to the introspection of government and the forces and influences which control it. This contribution is distinctly on the right side, constructive and for the betterment of American life and our institutions.

AN EDITORIAL IN THE NEWS

Sometimes a little news dispatch points its own moral better than a whole column of editorial comment could do.

A man was found dead in the sand dunes on the outskirts of Manistec, Mich., the other day. Evidently he had died of exposure. Beside him, half gripped in the fingers of one hand, was a quart whisky bottle, nearly empty. The story that told about it concluded:

"Contents of the bottle will be sent to the state chemists for analysis."

That story, we submit, needs no editorial writer to point its moral.

St. Paul's Cathedral, London, contains the Chapel of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, which is used only once a year.

The Remedy is Worse Than the Malady

HAROLD THE SEER says he's going to save a lot of those pre-election forecasts and run them serially in this column. He opines that they'll seem funny enough then, and will require no elaboration.

Personally, I don't see why newspapers should carry streamers on page one urging everyone to vote at elections. Voting early is all right, but I'm agin voting often, not on general principles, but because this "Election Extra" stuff is too hard on the newspapers. "Imagine sitting up for 48 hours at a stretch watching printers tick off the news. I can't see why ordinary people—political lights and others—want to stay up all night with us, when they can go home and sleep. It know now what the cartoonist meant when he wrote: "It may be comedy for some folks, but it's tragedy for me."

The car had broken down, and the pair of legs protruding from underneath seemed to indicate that repairs were in progress. "Had a breakdown?" inquired the passerby. "Oh, no, only playing hide-and-seek with the works," came a muffled voice from underneath the car. But the questioner was not easily daunted. "What power car is it?" "Forty horse." "What's wrong with it?" "Well, as far as I know, came the answer, "thirty-nine horses have bolted and the remaining one is too upset to answer questions."

Who would ever think of naming a Chinese city after the sound that comes out of an old Ford horn?

Since the auto came more than one man recalls the years he wasted in learning to hitch a horse artistically in front of a lady's house. She: That was a fine ride we had. He: I'll say! MAKE YOUR OWN JOB

A man got stalled with his automobile in a mudhole near Loch Raven last week. While making a vain attempt to get out, a small boy approached with a team of horses. "Want me to haul you out, mister?" "How much do you want?" "Three dollars."

After the work had been done and the money paid the tourist asked: "Do you pull out many cars here?" "About twice a day on the average," replied the boy.

"Do you work nights, too?" inquired the tourist.

"Yes, I haul water for the mudhole."

AGAIN THE BETTER MAN WINS

In the course of the Cox-Harding presidential campaign I compared the two candidates physically, in a series of articles written after special interviews and examinations of the candidates. At that time I was a black-hearted TR-orator, that is, whatever politics T. R. seemed to approve, I was for 'em. I visited Senator Harding first, at his headquarters in Marion.

Mr. Harding exacted a promise that I should not divulge anything unfavorable concerning his physical condition and I not only agreed to that, but assured him I'd just as he did about having my personal physical frailties discussed in print. So I couldn't tell much of a story about the senator's physical fitness for the greatest office in the world. Among intimate friends I predicted privately that, if Harding was elected, he would not outlive his term. That was the thought that underlay what I had to say in the published articles about the ethical question of a man accepting nomination for the presidency of the United States without regard for his physical capacity to fulfill the trust the people might impose in him.

From Marion I went down to Columbus and visited Governor Cox. The governor, of course, was a younger man. My first impression was that he lacked the remarkable personal magnetism the senator had, the certainly he was cordial and kind enough to me. Governor Cox made no bones at all about going through the jumps for me, nor did he seem to care what I might say about him in my newspaper articles. Perhaps he knew his own health status as well as Senator Harding knew his. Anyway, I found the governor a pretty good subject. He was fit for the job his party wished to give him.

I haven't personally examined Hoover or Smith, but naturally have endeavored to weigh and compare the men from my point of view. The governor seemed older, but isn't (both men are about 45 years old). The secretary seemed more youthful, the probably his age was as old or older than the governor's. The Smith type or build of man is likely to live long and preserve his faculties; the Hoover type is likely to break down earlier from CVD or some of its manifestations—arteriosclerosis, myocarditis, Bright's disease, apoplexy.

Both candidates indulge in tobacco. Hoover hitting the pipe and Smith preferring cigars. The Smith type of man seems to withstand tobacco's toxic effects better than the Hoover type of man does. I concluded that Herbert Hoover probably had a blood pressure distinctly above normal, at least when he was delivering a speech while Alfred Smith's blood pressure probably remained serene in all circumstances.

Nowadays we hear much of the strain of public life. Just what may be strained by the proper activities of a man in office I do not quite understand, but my notion is that if the man is just himself on the square, and not guilty of anything or aware of wrong about him, he will suffer no more injury from his official life than you and I do from our respective callings. We have put a much too charitable interpretation on the "breakdown" or "collapse" of one and another racial as he neared Atlanta or exposure.

Taking into consideration work, play, eating, drinking, smoking, recreation, exercise, sleep, as essential factors, I concluded that Mr. Smith was the more temperate man, that Mr. Hoover's infatigations of the rules of hygiene or health seemed far from temperate or exceptional.

In the Cox-Harding contest I picked Cox as the better man, and he lost. In the Denney-Carpenter affair I picked the French actor, and he lost. In the Smith-Hoover unpleasantness I made up my mind the better man was going to win, and he did.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

One of The Forty Million

I am a girl (the correspondent says "young" girl) 17 years of age and am 5 feet 4½ inches tall. I weigh 105 pounds and have always been thin and underweight. I've been drinking for the last two years and recently have started smoking. But what... Have been told to stop drinking and smoking or I will get the consumption. Is that true? (Miss A. B.)

Answer—It would be no surprise to learn that you already have tuberculosis. When tuberculosis is winning the battle you have "consumption." Did you get any instruction about physiology and hygiene in school? Or were you too smart for that stuff? "Consumption" is one of the least of the fates in store for you if you continue on your present course.

Anyway It Itches

I have a breaking out on my foot. Several doctors have failed to relieve. They all call it toe itch. It itches terribly and breaks out with watery blisters and then dries up again. Have had it for two years on the sole of the foot. (M. E. R.)

Answer—I do not know whether hookworm disease prevails in your section of Kentucky. The invasion of the skin of the foot by the larvae of hookworms (a risk one takes in going barefoot in places where the soil is polluted) is the cause of one type of toe itch, also called ground itch and dew itch. Another type is due to a kind of ringworm infestation, often contracted by walking barefoot in bathing establishments, gymnasia and the like. Still a third type is associated with simple excessive sweating. Your complaint would suggest the ringworm type of toe itch. However, the best all around remedy I can suggest is Waldfeld's ointment—this is not a proprietary preparation, but a formula the druggist must make up for you, as follows:

Salicylic acid 15 grains
Benzoin acid 30 grains
Petroleumum 1 ounce

Apply a little of the ointment once a day for a week or 10 days. Then rest off for a week, and another course of ointment if necessary.

Swim and Suffle

Whenever I go swimming I catch a cold. But the cold doesn't affect any other part of the body only the nose. It takes a day or so to get rid of it. Please tell me what causes it and how to prevent it. (W. K.)

Answer—Taking your own terms at face value the trouble is obviously due to exposure to dampness and the logical way to prevent it is by keeping out of the water. Should you ever conclude that it isn't a cold at all, write about it and I'll advise.

Adventures In The Library

By Arnold Mulder

HOW "PICKWICK" EVOLVED
It is a queer and interesting fact that "Pickwick," one of the most enormously popular books of the nineteenth century, came into being almost by chance, or at least so haphazardly that it can hardly be distinguished from chance. Ralph Straus has once more told the story in his biography of Dickens.

Usually the illustrations in a book are determined by the text; the artist reads the author's stuff and makes his pictures accordingly. In the case of "Pickwick" the process was reversed. The publishers had an artist who had made a series of pictures. They needed someone to furnish some text with the pictures and gave the job to young Dickens. That was the beginning of "Pickwick."

There was a publishing fad at the time of getting up pictures about sporting gentlemen who went to the country and had various mild adventures—very much in the manner of the adventures of the characters in present day strips. Even today it is not uncommon for artists to furnish the pictures and for some one else to put in the wording.

That is what Dickens was supposed to do with the adventures of this hunting club. If he had been just an ordinary man he would have done his job and let it go at that; then "Pickwick" as we know it today would never have come into being. The book of cartoons with their Dickens reading under them would have died as any number of other such publishing ventures died.

But it happened that Dickens was a genius and it is hard to hold a genius down. He did not know anything about hunting clubs and the idea at first did not appeal to him. He was a city man to the marrow of his bones and he had hardly ever left the city streets. He was a hard working shorthand reporter for a newspaper. The writing of the captions for the sporting cartoons was a side issue.

But presently the idea took hold of him and he fired his imagination and he made the reading matter under the pictures, which was supposed to be secondary, so interesting that people forgot to look at the pictures.

After the very first issue of the periodical in which they appeared the sketches ran over England like a fire. The circulation increased by scores of thousands and soon the publishers saw that they had stumbled upon something that was immensely valuable. They were enormously surprised, and so was Dickens himself. He had had no more idea of writing a book than of flying, but he quickly saw that he had stumbled upon a gold mine.

Then he began to take it seriously. He was very young, under 25, and the artist who had drawn the pictures for the early issues of the magazine was at the height of his career and a man with a reputation. But that did not stop the boy Dickens from taking for himself the first place in the joint venture from it. Maybe they ought to take a straw vote on it.

VOTERS FAVOR SUBWAY JOB BY 241 BALLOTS

Many Fail to Vote on Proposal—First and Second Wards Carry Referendum

Construction of the subway at the railroad crossing on E. Wisconsin ave., ordered by the Wisconsin railroad commission, is favored by a majority of Appleton citizens, the referendum at Tuesday's election shows.

The majority is exceedingly small, however, affirmative votes exceeding the negative ballots by only 241. There were 4,699 ballots cast in support of the proposal and 4,458 cast in the "no" column.

Only 9,157 persons voted on the referendum, although several thousand more than this number went to the poles in the city. As many as several hundred referendum blanks were turned in at the majority of precincts in the city without any margin whatever.

The smaller vote on the referendum was laid to two reasons. Many people have indicated little or no interest in the project. Others were of the opinion that the referendum was a foolish gesture, holding that the subway will have to be constructed no matter how the people vote because of the railroad commission's order.

Four wards opposed the subway and two approved it. The affirmative vote in the First and Second wards was so large, and the negative vote in the Third, Fifth and Sixth wards was so close to the affirmative vote, that the "yes" ballots outnumbered those with "no" indicated on them.

The most sweeping opposition was voiced in the Fourth ward, where almost 200 more voted against the subway than for it. Only 25 votes difference was recorded in the Sixth ward, and but four in the Fifth ward. Thirty more voted in the negative than in the affirmative in the Third ward.

Following is the vote by wards:

	Yes	No
First ward	1,807	740
Second ward	707	459
Third ward	980	1,010
Fourth ward	225	524
Fifth ward	848	852
Sixth ward	803	828

NEW FASHIONS

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

BEAUTY HINTS

THE NEW Saint Sinner

Tony found her father sitting in an awning-covered, upholstered swing on the flag-stoned terrace behind the drawing room. As she slipped silently through one of the French windows she saw a wreath of smoke curling about his head. She ran and flung herself into his arms before he suspected her presence. "Spank me, Pat darling! Spank me like you used to when I was little and naughty," she sobbed, cuddling against his breast.

Pat Tarver's arms did not go around her, and his voice was neither angry nor loving as he answered: "You'd better go back to bed. It's getting cool."

"Oh, Pat!" Tony sobbed, shaking his shoulders. "Don't be polite to me now—after what I've done. Tony's sorry, Pat, so sorry."

Pat Tarver smoked a while, his lips making a little put-put sound against his pipe. Then slowly he laid it on the padded seat of the swing and put his arms about his daughter. He had never in her life held out against her so long.

"Crystal's idea?" he asked huskily, after a long pause, during which Tony sobbed violently.

"Yes, but—oh, have I forgotten how to play fair? She thought of it," Tony confessed miserably, trying to check her sobs, "but I jumped at it."

"Pretty good scheme," Pat commented gravely. "Showed me that I'm a middle-aged fool, running after a middle-aged cheap sort of movie star—though I'm not so dead sure you're altogether right about her. Tony, she's had a pretty rough time of it. But we'll let that pass. You sure showed old Pat up to himself while you were putting the screws on Elsie. Pretty good scheme."

"Oh, Pat, quit! You're breaking my heart!" Tony begged piteously. "We didn't mean to hurt you—that is—oh, go on and punish me! I deserve it, but Pat darling, I—I did want you to get over it and not take a chance on making Peg a laughing stock with her new friends and maybe breaking her poor little heart. You know that, don't you, Pat?"

"I'm not scolding you," Pat reminded her gravely. "I was just a little surprised at your methods. My gallant Tony—more like a fair-minded boy than a—Well, we'll let that pass, too. Reckon it's time for me to say I'm sorry, too. . . . Sort of glad it's over, Tony—more than just sort of. Not that there was anything—his voice stumbled with embarrassment.

"I know!" Tony interrupted eagerly. "You just wanted a little romance before—"

"Before I put the other foot in the grave?" Pat chuckled, and the sound was the sweetest that Tony had heard. It meant that she and Pat were "all right" again.

"You know I didn't mean it when

Gored Skirt Flares

THE gored skirt makes its chic appearance in the beige charcolaine frock of a Maison Beer traveling ensemble. Each gore is emphasized by an outside seamline. The beige coat is cut full, is reversible and can be very gay with its green and beige striped inside worn outside.

GREY AND BLACK

An evening gown makes smart use of grey and black. Joined in zigzag lines, both front and back, one half of a low necked evening gown is black sequins, the other silver. A long train from the natural waistline follows the half and half idea.

California produces annually evaporated whole milk worth $15,000,000.

I harped away on the "older generation, you devil," Tony laughed shakily. "Why, darling, Pat, you're younger than I am this minute! You're so young that sometimes I feel I ought to make you give up smoking for fear it will stunt your growth! And then I remember that you're six feet tall and the grandest, handsomest, most understanding father in the world! . . . Pat's" her voice changed suddenly, became wistful. "I'll promise never to be a cat again, if you—if you—"

"If I promise never to step out again? Do you think I'd dare, with a vixen like you on my trail?"

PARENT NEEDS GOOD CONTROL OF EMOTIONS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

ONE of the causes of lowered efficiency, we know, is lack of emotional control.

If one is angry, jealous, or hating someone actively, he cannot work well. Other things, such as over-excitement, worry, shame, fear, or even a more pleasant sensation such as intense love will undermine not only work, but mental processes and health.

A temperamental person with a hair-trigger nervous system, jumping from the extremes of happiness one day to the depths of despair the next, or lost in an abyss of hate or other emotion, is seldom well moreover his work is likely to be erratic and none too dependable.

The daily job of being a parent requires that mentally, morally and physically, he be efficient. But he cannot be efficient if he loses emotional control.

It is easy, of course, to tell fathers and mothers "ever to get angry, to overcome their dislikes and hatreds, to banish discontent. But it is a fact that parents can do a great deal of harm to children by lack of emotional control in themselves.

Worry, we cannot get away from so easily. But half the time we worry about things that are not necessary. For one thing we worry too much about what other people will think. Besides, half our worries are not worries, but longings.

Self control, an even disposition, liking people, seeing to be envious of other people's luck, not getting foolishly worked up over trifles—all these things will make home happier and the care of the children easier.

In other words the best parents are those who are satisfied and happy, and like Emerson's and happy, and like Emerson's unfortunate motto, are those who "avoid excessive joy and complaining grief."

Children instinctively respect the mother or father who refuses to give way to petty emotions. Naturally, obedience will follow much more readily in the wake of this respect.

NEW PURSES

New purses grow as elegant as gowns. A grey kidskin has a floral motif worked out in modernistic manner in ten shades of pastel colored kid. The lining of one inside pocket is silver, the other gold.

BRIMS POPULAR

Turbans with cuffs or brims of some original cut are outselling the brimless skull cap now. The long sides, or some tricky manipulation of one or both sides, with the front brim short or turned up, are the favorites.

thoroughly mixed. Arrange in casserole and add any leftover beaten egg to hot sauce. Pour sauce over cauliflower in casserole and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven.

Hats That Lead Fashion Parade

1—A plain felt hat with a slightly irregular brim is simply banded with a strip of felt and finished off with a fancy buckle. The model is made in beige and the ornament is gold and brown to harmonize with the morning suit it accompanied.

2—Soft black panne needs little trimming. A bunch of crosses or aigrettes makes it a very dressy afternoon hat or even a restaurant hat.

3—This muff ensemble is made of black felt and a very supple fur called "gayac." It is smart on a black velvet afternoon suit.

4—Black felt lined with black velvet with a narrow band and a red and gold buckle.

5—A beige and white chine felt is trimmed with a green feather.

6—A turban of black velvet and felt goes with a neckpiece of fur crown.

BY JEAN PATOU

PARIS—My millinery department has been a source of never-failing interest to me ever since I started it. In fact, I find myself becoming engrossed in hats, much to my surprise. At the outset it soon would get ahead of me if I were not careful. The reason for this is that every day and modistes never stop creating. Hats, therefore, are often in advance of current fashions.

Only a few seasons back a hat was not such an integral part of an ensemble as it is today. Now it is a complement, not an accessory; the fourth piece of a three-piece suit. By this I mean that a hat designed to go with a certain ensemble not only completes it but cannot very well be worn with any other.

The hat completing a sports ensemble must have very different lines from that meant to accompany a dressier suit of an afternoon costume. The matters of material, shape and trimming—all these are of the greatest importance.

A supple, floppy-brimmed hat or a too-elaborate creation with aigrettes would look absurd with a suit, just as a plain felt would greatly detract from the charm of a clinging afternoon-gown. The hat must absolutely harmonize with the dress it is meant for. It must recall some detail of it, in the shape of a buckle, incrustations, an irregular brim to match an irregular skirt, or any other theme used to trim the dress.

Could women realize how much a hat can mar or enhance their aspect generally, they would spend even more time and thought on the choice of a hat. I have a client who is reputed to be one of the smartest women in Paris. She invariably wears the same shaped hat, but with it achieves the necessary variations of texture and trimming to harmonize with her gowns.

My client has studied her type and spent much time and energy before deciding on the style most becoming to her. The result is that she always looks well-hatted, which perhaps is more important than to look well-gowned. What is more, her hats never look demode.

The difficulty in selecting a hat for a woman is that it must be becoming to her and at the same time suit the dress. The choosing of a dress is that much less complicated.

THE TINYMITES

By Hal Cochran

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

THE Tynmites high on the mast, all wondered, while the time flew past, how soon they'd be discovered by the captain down below. They felt that he would look around until the Tynmites were found. Then, what would happen to them all, of course they didn't know.

Said Coppy, "Well, we all can rest away up in this queer crew's nest. That's what they call this place we're in. Mr. what a funny name." Just then the captain shouted, loud, "Hey! Way up there! You Tynmy crowd had better come down here on deck. Just what is this, a game?"

"Whoops! We're discovered!" Clowny said. "Oh, my, oh, my, I really dread a climb down to the deck again. I wonder what's in store. That captain sure will start a fuss, if he is still real mad at us." But Scouty snapped, "Oh, let's go down ere he begins to roar."

So, down they started, very slow. The captain watched and laughed, "Ho! Ho! You thought I wouldn't find you," he exclaimed. "Well, we shall see! I'm not a very ugly gent, but you deserve some punishment for causing me to take a flop, and playing tricks on me."

Soon they were down, right by his side, and promptly little Carpy cried, "We're really very sorry. Please forgive us, just this once." "You shall all have bits of work to do. If you should go unpunished, you would think that I'm a dunce."

So, everyone was put to work and warned he shouldn't try to shirk. "Now first of all," the captain said, "I have a job that's just what you need. You Tynmy crowd can step out and be a waiter man." Thus Clowny served the captain bold, when he sat down to eat.

(The Tynmites are given some more work in the next story.)

It wasn't so long ago when this city "out-shirts" 'astounded the small town gal—

But now — the "out-shirts" of us small town surpasses the city miss!

The same ingredients! the same wonderful woods flavor!

Just like the "bean hole" beans of the Maine woods lumber camps

Of course you've heard of the wonderful baked beans they have in the Maine woods logging camps—"bean hole" beans, they're called.

They are baked all night in a big round-bellied bean pot in an outdoor ground oven. And according to those who have eaten them, there is no baked-bean flavor to compare with those Maine woods beans. They have the flavor and the fragrance of the very forest itself!

And now—think of it! Everyone, everywhere, can have beans just like those beans baked in the ground. The same flavor-rich ingredients, the same outdoor taste!

Because they are the first reproduction of that original "bean hole" flavor, they are called Bean Hole Beans. And they're like no other beans you've ever tasted! Give yourself, your family, this new pleasure. Have them for dinner tonight. Two sizes, medium and large.

One Vote in Other

New London—With 1,932 votes cast in the city's presidential election, Herbert Hoover in the city's five wards, polled a vote of 1,146 to his opponent's 786. New London saw the largest vote ever cast in its entire history. Nominally, the polling record is slightly under the 1,600 mark. The streets were crowded early in the day and tense excitement prevailed until after the presidential vote was announced. Liberty and Mukwa townships also recorded large votes, 130 in Liberty being cast, 63 out of these going to the Republican victor with the Democrat running a close second with 62. Schmedeman, Democratic candidate for governor won over the Kohler vote with 69 votes to Mr. Kohler's 45. Mukwa voters numbered fully 125 more than usual out of which Hoover won 125.

In the city the only ward to carry Smith was the Second in which the plurality was 58 to the Republican vote of 37. The first ward gave Hoover 272, Smith 168. In the third ward 210 votes were for Smith and 237 for Hoover; the fourth showed 234 for the Democrat with 325 for the victor. The fifth ward, anticipated to be strong for Smith showed only 76 votes for the Democrat with 165 for Mr. Hoover.

In the county race between Burnham and Schmiedke for the assembly, Mr. Burnham late in the evening was leading in 21 precincts with a majority of about 2,500. This denoted a victory from the entire county, as the votes recorded came from most disputed territory. In the county vote Hoover led in 33 precincts out of 48 with a plurality of 824 to Smith's 2378.

In the city voting the demand for ballots overshot the mark early in the days election. All available sample ballots were put into service as substitutes.

WORK IN CABINET POLISHED HOOVER FOR PRESIDENCY

President-elect Has Been Preparing for White House Since 1921

BY CLINTON COFFIN
Washington—(AP)—Eight years of cabinet service did more to lay the foundation for the political career of Herbert Hoover than was done by his romantically successful business performance, or by the enduring fame of his war exploits.

Although the orphaned Iowa farmer boy who rose before 1914 to lead perhaps the greatest single combination in mine engineering and mine management had, by outstanding professional skill, by notable labor organization and by cunning finance, attached international importance to his personality, the accomplishment was really visible to a rather small group of cosmopolitan population.

Further, despite that his war service in relief of the Belgians had opened a new vista of accomplishment and had branched out until the movement he led was responsible for provisioning half the white population of the globe; despite that he had dared to conduct a satisfactory war food administration for the United States, in days when food administrators forced to put bars between people and their food became almost instantly the most hated citizens of their particular countries, these things counted for comparatively little until the American political arena. That was proven in 1920, when his friends, great and humble, tried to get him a presidential nomination and strove valiantly in both democratic and republican party ranks.

That first presidential enterprise was simple fiasco. The delegate to the convention placed behind Hoover's name in the conventions of 1920 was humiliating; all that was left of the bitterness of failure was ambition to try again, held firmly not alone by the man himself, but by the host of people who had counted it a thrilling privilege to work in relief expedition as "Hoover men." He buckled down to learn the game of politics; to conform to its traditions and accepted President Harding's invitation to take the post of secretary of commerce.

"Chief, this is a long way down Pennsylvania avenue from the White House," observed one of those enterprising associates who came to Washington for the Harding inauguration as he greeted Hoover, just installed as commerce secretary.

"Well, it's just as far as you fellows got me, isn't it?" Hoover retorted. The rest of the conversation isn't related, but the spirit of the exchange set the note for the never-ending, purposeful exertion of the man and his growing and brilliant galaxy of supporters during the succeeding years. Hoover's one constant, careful exhibition of his fitness for the place; accomplishment in public service—plus the clear advertisement of accomplishment—was the argument they sought to make the nation.

In some ways the personality of Herbert Hoover, with which the enterprise had to do, was almost basically unsuited for politics. Hitherto most American politicians have possessed some of the gifts that go toward making actors successful. They are touched with what the psychologist might call exhibitionism—they know how, almost subconsciously, to impress people, singly or in multitude, to charm people by their bearing, their words and their gesture.

Hoover did not and he does not. A man of no pretension, wedded to a simplicity that makes him even careful to use the shortest word, he could not at first make a political speech unless seriously stirred. He could write well and turn a striking phrase; he had a delightful sense of humor, but he did not much like a crowd. Outside of an intellect admittedly first class, and the stored memory of lifetime of inveterate work, he had but one quality of importance to political value. That was his capacity for assimilating the viewpoints of conflicting and competing groups and of puzzling out feasible compromises. The gift was akin to that ordinarily demonstrated by the legislator of long service and in combination with administrative experience it took him a long way on the road that had been laid out for him.

For there was plenty for a man of his mark to tackle from the moment the Harding administration got under sail. The government had to unwind the tangled web in forty different directions; there was business depression almost everywhere as the war boom died down; the railroads were desperately situated; war wage levels had to be adjusted; and international relations, usually a field for single minded operation of the state department, had to be considered in the light of the economic and financial necessities of all the nations. Hoover's reputation was soon to be tested; the president literally thrust him as the shock troop leader to take up each of the harder points.

Hoover's long experience in organization let him climb free almost instantly at the departmental routine that sometimes buries a cabinet officer for the rest of his political life. He had his desk clear, and in a matter of weeks was fitting genially from one conference to another. He worked out a well defined method for such things. First there would be a preliminary Hoover investigation of the situation coming up, and then there would be some quiet and unnoted meetings with parties at interest and supposedly best informed. This second stage was frequently around the Hoover dinner table, of which more later, for this dinner table business was a constantly working expedient of his cabinet life. And last there was a big conference, everybody talking free, but underneath the surface invariably and always a complete Hoover set program, working almost automatically out as planned.

Among the first gatherings of the kind was the unemployment conference of 1921. Out of it emerged what were probably a set of palliatives; it apparently left Hoover imbued with a conviction or so as to economic trends and one hobby. The conviction was that wage levels for all classes of labor had been permanently boosted to a higher base; that it was the duty of management to accept the fact and to work out betterment in efficiency that would enable commodities—products of labor—notwithstanding to be marketed at lower prices. The money arose from study of the concept that business activity must move in cycles, up and down, fluctuating in great waves from prosperity to depression. Never since then has there been a day when a Hoover-led committee of some kind has not been studying this wave theory and speculating on the resources of business, science and politics which might be applied to leveling out the curve.

Cabinet Years Developed Hoover Into Politician

Seven years in the cabinet of two presidents gave Herbert Hoover a training in politics which was invaluable in the campaign just ended. These pictures show the President-elect in various moods. Fishing is his chief relaxation when he is tired.

Somewhere in this thinking he developed the idea of standardization, of a semi-national campaign to help along quantity production by getting users and makers of every industrial article to cut down the numbers of sizes, shapes and qualities of things made and kept in stock. Amazing savings are claimed for this enterprise, enthusiasts crediting it with some substantial share of responsibility for American industrial prosperity in following years. International trade promotion efforts normally within his departmental field got a new impetus, and recent years have seen his organizations poking repeatedly into the wastes considered inevitable in modern distribution of goods through wholesale and retail establishments.

All was far from being rosy with the various Hoover forays into the political economy of the nation from '21 to '24. In the case of the coal industry, riven by strike and strike, the conference methods scored something close to failure. The repeated strikes broadened in 1922 to take in the railroad shop crafts; the situation, revolving around cheap and union coal production in the south and expensive union coal production in the north could only wear itself out.

In it finally Hoover's concern began to be that of trying to help the general public while the locked forces played out. He rather successfully got non-union coal producers to hold down prices when the union strikes eliminated competition from union producers, although there was much rowing in the attempt. He is at his best under pressure, in contests, and coal producers who agreed to sell for $3 a ton when they could have taken $10 learned something about that.

"I warn you gentlemen now," he thundered at one gathering where the program was arranged, "that either you bring about this arrangement within your own industry to protect the people of the United States or the government of the country will lay such a hold on your industry that you will never get rid of it again."

These things leave political scars. Hoover failed to carry the presidential primaries in the coal state of West Virginia. Also in 1922 Harding and his advisers, trying to settle the rail strike, conceived the notion that the New York bankers could control the rail presidents and help out a little. Hoover went there to another private conference; the rail never has been completely lifted, but the fact remains that nothing was accomplished, and some lasting irritations were aroused.

Possibly the nearest to a flat break came when the conference method was tried on the agricultural situation. There was an administrative rather than a Hoover program there, but the seeds of McNary-Hooverism, the idea of controlling the foreign marketing of farm crop surplus to maintain desired prices within the country were sown there. Hoover, chairman for the gathering, savaged an adjournment of one national gathering before it got action on the point, and a sore spot still somewhat noticeable was left in his campaign enterprises. Some farm leaders have never forgotten or forgiven and add food administration policies to the burden of their grievance against him.

When the scandals of 1924, Teapot dome and the other charges against his fellow cabinet members, Fall and Daugherty, broke, Secretary Hoover and his associates in administration stood back awhile. There was little else to do, except to fend off the attempts to muddy up their own records, until President Coolidge, triumphantly elected, demonstrated that the country considered guilt in the matter personal to individuals and not general to the republican party. The next three years gave Hoover opportunity for appearing at his best, as disasters in the Mississippi valley and in Vermont brought him out to organize succor. Between whiles he had been tentatively putting together the elements of a policy that an elected president might carry along.

He drafted and presented a plan for marking waterways a real asset to the country's commerce, opening the Mississippi-Ohio-Missouri channels and adopted the scheme for a ship canal into the Great Lakes. Life everything else in politics that carried and carries opposition as well as support. He early sought to bring about a compact between the seven states interested in the Colorado river for use of its waters and a great scale development. One of them, Arizona, bucked out of alignment, and with a failure on local agreement national discussions quickly developed.

He joined to the hurt amazement of some of his old Hoover associates, wholeheartedly in the demand of the Coolidge administration for collection of the war debts from Allied nations to the full capacity of their payment.

It was a poor day at the Commerce department when there was not a committee session or two for the secretary to attend, and a bad week when a new campaign was not initiated. All of it was accompanied by effective publicity work.

In the midst of the activity he inspired and led, he dwelt the seven years and remained always the same person, outwardly impassive, unmoved, generally silent. Yet he is highly sensitive and almost uniquely awarded of criticism. Application of attention to duties before him is continual rather than intense. Running organizations is almost a habit with him and every Hoover machine has something of the same characteristics. Somebody at the top would be responsible to him for its functioning, and then in it there would be a parallel machine, of functionaries almost casually reporting to him personally on the qualities of the ostensible leaders. Approachable by anybody, there is considerable doubt that anybody got awfully close to Herbert Hoover. The most intimate associates speak of "the Chief" and have a little awe in the mention. Mostly every man who got an honor or a job from Herbert Hoover had the clear notion that he had to make good or get out. It is an odd atmosphere in politics, but it has always clung to the associations Hoover built.

As said before, the dinners represented the conciliating element in the long campaign. The Hoovers never dined alone, and frequently they dined with many, in a vogue somewhat removed from the formal. It was a heterogeneous company that passed through the dining hall, and many of them Hoover won. Nearly everybody in congress and diplomacy, and even in journalism—toward the end of the seasons—passed through the invitation lists. The two children of the family, grown and away, left the secretary and his wife free to the whole hearted encouragement of the army of people eventually enlisted to make him president. In the limited groups that a dinner table can accommodate Hoover's real likeability, his grasp and his fitness were easily brought out.

But the work never ceased. From nine to six each day the man was at his office or meeting elsewhere people to whom he told things or who told him. Regularly he kept three private secretaries busy and on occasion supplemented the force. The pace would get him once in a while, and then he would lie off to a trout stream or the coast waters to catch a fish. Even a presidential campaign may appear in a sort of a vacation to a man whose preparation for it was so much associated with work.

MANY STARS OF SCREEN
SEEN IN "SHOW PEOPLE"

When King Vidor was filming "Show People," now playing at Fischers Appleton Theatre in which Marion Davies and William Haines are costarred, he got around that part of the script which called for the appearance of a number of motion picture stars handily.

Figuring that Charlie Chaplin probably could play himself, in the picture life behind the scenes at Hollywood, just as well as, if not a bit better than any other actor, he got Chaplin to do that particular bit out of friendship. So Chaplin does a scene, with Miss Davies, in which he is himself, not in comedy costume; Harry Crocker, Chaplin's studio manager, also does a bit.

In the same way, when Vidor wished to show a group of famous picture plays at lunch, he didn't have a number of extras disguise themselves as the characters, but persuaded the characters themselves to play themselves. Thus, in the luncheon scene, the extras are Douglas Fairbanks, who does a bit of juggling, William S. Hart, Norma Talmadge, John Gilbert, Mae Murray, Rod La Rocque, Renee Adoree, Leatrice Joy, George K. Arthur, Karl Dane, Aileen Pringle, Claire Windsor, Estelle Taylor, D. Sebastian and Polly Moran.

Marion Davies also plays herself in a bit in the film, as does Eleanor Glyn, Lew Cody, Vidor, himself, and other notables of the film colony. There are many back-stage scenes in the Metro Goldwyn-Mayor studio, where the picture was made.

Miss Davies plays a Southern girl who is seeking fame in the movies and Haines is a shipstuck comedian who helps her to stardom and her career up the ladder. It furnishes the comedy and satire of the film.

PLAN TRAINING CONFERENCE FOR PATROL LEADERS

Committee Hopes to Engage Menasha Memorial Building for Gathering

Plans for a Patrol Leader's Training conference to be held Friday, Nov. 30, and Saturday, Dec. 1, are being arranged by M. G. Clark, valley scout executive. A committee composed of Lyle Eckrich and Anthony Thelen, both of Troop 9 will secure a place for the conference. It is possible the affair will be held at Menasha building.

A tentative program includes a discussion on 11 topics. Lyle Eckrich will discuss patrol meetings; Leslie Ramsey, planning patrol hikes; Kenneth Walsworth, developing patrol projects and craftwork; and Donald Roush will tell about the training of tenderfoot scouts.

Troop and Patrol records is the topic to be presented by John Loesel. Sergeant Joseph Dwyer will talk on drilling and giving commands. Other topics to be discussed are building patrol morale, developing the patrol good turn, making maps, and instruction and examination of scoutcraft.

Recreation, songs, stunts, yells and other activities will be included in the program as it is finally laid out in detail, according to Mr. Clark. Following the presentation of each subject there will be a round table discussion.

The outdoor program is to be held at a place where there is plenty of wood for the building and the program will cover methods and ways in which older boy leaders of the troop can instruct and examine members of other patrol in the outdoor scout tests such as fire building, cooking, tracking, scout axmanship, estimation, signaling, nature study, knife-craft and others.

Here Is Pictorial Record Of Herbert Hoover's Early Career

HOOVER CAME INTO WORLD FAME IN WAR

Ability of Organizer in Hectic 1914 Started Him on Road to Whitehouse

Herbert Clark Hoover loomed as a strong possibility for the presidency shortly after President Coolidge in August, 1927, issued his "I do not choose" statement.

At that time Mr. Hoover was enjoying a renewed prominence throughout the country because of his administration of relief measures in the flooded areas of the Mississippi Valley, where his activities served to recall his relief work during the World War.

From the start the Hoover strength throughout the country appeared to be greater than that of other candidates for the Republican nomination. Some of his political opponents in his own party raised issues to question his qualification or eligibility for the nomination, but few of these issues persisted for long.

Hoover's name first commanded general attention in the tense days of August, 1914. The swift German onrush across Belgium into France brought home the fatal significance of war to legions of Americans, pleasure seekers, tourists, and students who annually scatter across the European continent. In the first clash, while the armies of the nations of the Old World mobilized for "Der Tag," these hapless visitants found money almost worthless and bank credit entirely so. In darkened cities out of which trains no longer ran, or countryside devoid of shelter and subsistence, where the stranger and the alien could look neither for tolerance, nor assistance in escaping.

The news of their predicament had barely begun to trickle when newspaper readers generally learned also that a hostile formed American relief committee in London, headed by a man named Hoover, had assumed the responsibility of setting them away. The task, it appeared, had been performed with unexpected swiftness, and for Mr. Hoover there ensued a decade of high pressure performance, of ever widening responsibility, that at the height of the war made him chief of the effort of the Allied countries and the United States to subject their populations and their armies. Cessation of war did not end his activities, and he remained one of the foremost figures in American political life, undertaking major duties in connection with the food provisions for the exhausted peoples of half the area of Eurasia, and eventually serving with recognized distinction in the cabinet. Hardly anything but the social upheaval of the war could have brought to the front rank of American political life a personality at once so curiously gifted and so curiously constricted. Though an almost intuitive grasp of group psychology was one basis of Mr. Hoover's success, first in organizing industry and later in meeting the huge emergencies in famine and pestilence, his contacts with strangers always exhibited him as impassive, withdrawn, individual, incapable of demonstrativeness and devoid of impressiveness.

The war was the occasion of the introduction of Mr. Hoover to the general public, but his career and accomplishment had been much beyond ordinary long before. Born in West Branch, Iowa, Aug. 10, 1874, the son of a blacksmith and a Quaker mother, he had been orphaned by death of both parents before he was seven years old. Relatives with whom he then made his home moved to Oregon, and at 13 years he was forced with the task of earning his own living, as a boy worker in truck gardens, and later in city offices.

Bent upon obtaining an education, Mr. Hoover worked his way into and through the then newly founded Stanford university in California, emerging in 1895 with a degree in mining engineering and geology. In the succeeding 20 years, first as mine laborer, then as mine manager and operator, in all the desolate places of the world where mineral wealth is found, he made for himself a unique reputation and a large fortune. To admitted technical proficiency as an engineer, his books and monographs and standard textbooks in colleges today—Mr. Hoover combined proven ability in organizing and financing, and became identified with a group of offices in London and New York who engaged in mining and metallurgical enterprises in most of the quarters of the world.

From West Australia he had gone to China, and was engaged in the development of coal and iron deposits when the Boxer rebellion cooped him up with foreigners in Peking, where he underwent the siege of 1900. Before the Allied troops relieved the legation prisoners, he had organized the best relief for Chinese and American. He built a vast fortune later, for the owners of the mining properties, and thereafter in Burma, Russia, Alaska and Mexico, initiated or directed enterprises which were for the most part successful. In 1913, it was estimated that 175,000 men were employed by the corporations for which he was acting as executive engineer. He manifested his connections with scholarship and research activities as well, and found time during the period to translate, with the collaboration of his wife, "De Res Metallica," a Latin work which is the earliest known treatise on mining. He had married in 1899 Miss Lou Henry, a Stanford school mate, and had two sons, Allan and Herbert.

From the time of the American relief committee that extricated the American tourists of 1914, Mr. Hoover was drafted immediately to a far greater task—the effort to feed and supply the Belgian population. He helped organize the Commission for Relief in Belgium, and took its leadership. It was not suspected at the time how far that task would develop; when the work wound up at the end of the war there had been expended, mostly under Mr. Hoover's direction, $1,500,000,000 advanced by loans from allied governments or given by charity. It was operating there fleet of 200 steamships, and the peoples of northern France and Belgium had existed during four and a half years only by its functioning. Third and last ad Hoover came

When the United States went into the war, President Wilson promptly appointed Mr. Hoover food administrator for the United States, though the latter remained in charge of the Belgian commission. In taking the post, which war time experience in other countries had proved one of the most difficult to hold, Mr. Hoover told friends he "expected to die on the first barbed wire entanglements."

His success, however, soon was conceded universally. On the war boards which supervised the nation's task of munitioning the vast army and navy created for the struggle, he became a dominant figure, and at the moment of the armistice his organizations functioned to supply and feed the exhausted city populations of even the defeated powers.

While the peace conference was going on, the American Relief Administration, which Mr. Hoover headed, was feeding children in 23 different nations, and adults in half as many. It coped with typhus epidemics and in many places almost took over government temporarily. Governmental credits, charitable donations, and utilization of surplus war supplies were all involved. As late as 1921, there was still some localized organization for feeding of children, and Mr. Hoover then a cabinet member was able swiftly to expand this remnant of the relief machinery when famine in Soviet Russia led to congressional appropriations to help a starving population there. This last of the enterprises which he operated for supplying food to famished people on a large scale did not wind up until 1923.

No part of the war activity had attracted more attention than the Hoover relief enterprises, in the United States and abroad, and when in 1920, the season for presidential politics opened, his name was early cruited about for the foremost political honor the nation can give. There was an embarrassing interlude, however, when it appeared that his long life in the engineering field and his later war work had deprived him of any partisan political status whatever. Workers in his behalf had difficulty in settling upon a political party in which to join to forward his interests, and for a time he was proposed as both a Republican and a Democratic presidential nominee.

The New York World, for years a stalwart Democratic organ, warmly espoused his candidacy, and there were echoes of support in other Democratic papers in various sections. Soon afterward, he issued an open letter declaring himself a Republican. But his cause did not flourish, because it had behind it none of the party bosses. When his name was placed before the Chicago convention there was spontaneous and prolonged applause in the galleries, but scarcely a ripple among the delegates. He got only a handful of votes.

When President-elect Harding some months later, offered him the post of Secretary of Commerce, he accepted after stipulating that he was to have a free hand in reorganization of his department. He succeeded to the same place under President Coolidge. During later cabinet changes he was successfully tendered the departments of interior and agriculture, refusing in each case on the ground that his greatest usefulness would be in the post he retained.

In addition to operating his own department, Mr. Hoover served on the American debt commission and advised the White House on many important questions of policy. Constantly active in enlarging the field of work of his own department, he reorganized its foreign trade sections, summoned conferences to deal with unemployment and with transportation crises, represented the government in major industrial disputes, and appeared as the President's representative in the initiation of national engineering enterprises, such as the St. Lawrence canal and the Colorado basin compact.

HOOVER LIKES TO GET BEHIND WHEEL OF HIS AUTOMOBILE

Vice President-elect's Associates Call Him "Chief" and Wife Calls Him "Bert"

Washington —(AP)—Herbert Hoover's personal life reflects the driving efficiency that carried him from farm boy to world figure, but his habits are highlighted with many of the things the average man likes to do.

Often he takes the wheel of his car from his chauffeur, just like anyone else with a new automobile, and glories in the speed and precision of smooth working machinery. To divert his mind from serious affairs, he reads fast moving detective stories. He likes a pipe and has been known to exhibit a degree of esteem for a particular briar: by preference, however, he smokes high grade Cuban cigars.

Up the wall along the stairway in his home in Washington—in step-up fashion—hang many diplomas and degrees from seats of learning, the world over. On the walls of his office hang, one after the other, the public commissions that have been given him throughout the year. He has kept, too, a lot of mementos of his peculiar experiences throughout the world, particularly in the war. One of these takes the form of an extensive motion picture, with film excerpts contributed by the different governments.

In the background, however, of these highly human traits is the efficiency of the expert and, that extends even to the selection of his wearing apparel.

In the days when Hoover practiced his career as a mining engineer, he was known to journey from San Francisco to Burma he would have found there, likely, a complete outfit of wearing apparel exactly like the clothes he put on in San Francisco. He had four or five outfits parked around the world in different cities so he could always be newly clothed when traveling.

Most of the year he wears a soft, dark blue suit. Out of concession to Washington summer weather, he has adopted white flannel trousers and blue coat. He wears dress clothes frequently in the evening.

Hoover's chunky appearance is all that it appears to be. He has a magnificent constitution and is virtually never ill. He neck takes a 17 collar and he has "the great physical strength that goes with this squat type of bodily construction. In spite of years away from the physical hardships of mining work, he retains a great deal of muscular development that work gave him.

Hoover's fetish against exercise is well known. It is doubtful if he has ever been on a Washington golf course. He prefers to ride his car wherever he goes, and he usually maintains three machines in addition to the department limousine.

He has unusual hands, with long heavy fingers, and an artisan's deftness. He has learned fly fishing ex-

WORK IS ONLY HOBBY OF NEXT VICE PRESIDENT

Topeka, Kas. —(AP)—Work is Senator Charles Curtis' only "hobby."

In climbing the ladder of life, from jockey and cab driver to vice-president-elect, he has been too busy for any other kind of a hobby. During the third of a century spent in Washington, he has put in more 16-hour than 8-hour days.

The senator has several diversions for relaxing, however. Nearly every night he takes a walk, gazing at the stars, sometimes as long as 30 minutes. If the weather keeps him indoors, he turns to the radio for half hour of music. Occasionally he goes to the theatre, and less frequently to a baseball or football game.

Outdoor sports, especially horse racing, delight the former jockey, but there are few afternoons he can spend in a grandstand.

perthness and likewise has the stamina to try successfully trolling for the big, fighting sea fish, such as barracuda and tarpon.

He eats regularly, but never over heavily. In recent years lunch has been brought to him in his office at the commerce department, but he has pretty regularly dined in company or at home.

Hoover has a habitual reserve that usually keeps people at arms length, and the workers that surround him mostly call him "chief." His wife calls him "Bert."

His two sons have been out of Washington and grown up for 10 years, but in the early days of Mr. Hoover's tenure as secretary of commerce they went out on Sundays on auto drives, and once or twice Hoover organized a party of youngsters and built play dams across some of the Virginia streams to make miniature water falls.

While sensitive to criticism, especially of a public sort, Hoover usual-

GET WARNING ABOUT "BOGUS" SOLICITOR

Activities here of a man who represents himself as an agent for a large manufacturing company making household needs and who also claims connection with a large Pas-saic, N. J., orphanage has been reported to the chamber of commerce, according to Kenneth Corbett, secretary. The chamber vigilance committee has not sanctioned the solicitation and now is carrying on an investigation.

The solicitor, according to reports to Mr. Corbett, is making a house to house canvass. His story is that he is acting in behalf of the orphanage and a large manufacturer. The manufacturer's article is purchased on a time payment plan, the initial payment being given to the solicitor who turns it over to the orphanage.

ly has been anxious to get it, particularly upon the style and content of his written material, speeches and state papers. He both dictates and writes his material out in long hand.

In conference, if he has a chance, he marks up paper with a pencil, making curious three-sided, geometrical designs. He is likely to talk in a half undertone, scratching away at these esoteric designs, and it seems to help him to think. The tablet and pencil are always stuck under his hand.

He never bothers to keep records himself, but he has a fine set of files handled for him by a secretarial staff.

Hoover had a great big office in the commerce department and when nobody was there used to stride around it a good deal, one hand in his pocket.

It is a plain fact that he has spent most of his life attending to serious business, and the career has left its marks. He does his best writing late in the afternoon and seldom leaves off before 6 or 6:30 p. m.

No other payments are necessary until the article is delivered.

While Mr. Corbett has no reason to believe the man is not acting in good faith he says the solicitation looks "phony." Whenever questioned about approval by the chamber, the solicitor is reported to get angry and expound at length on the subject.

MRS. HOOVER SHARES GLORY WITH ILLUSTRIOUS HUSBAND

President-Elect's Wife Manages Two Large Homes

Visit Cleveland Birthplace

Mrs. Herbert Hoover and the two homes she manages are pictured above. To the left is Mrs. Hoover in one of the Oriental doorways of the Pala Alto, Calif., home which is pictured in the center. The Washington home of the Hoovers is shown below, and to the right is a recent picture of Mrs. Hoover.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoover on their tour through New Jersey stopped at the birthplace of Grover Cleveland to pay their respects to the memory of a Democratic president.

Here we have Senator Curtis with Dr. Herbert Work, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Nominee and His Friend

The New Presidential Family

This is the family which will occupy the White House in Washington after March 4. This picture shows Mr. Hoover surrounded by his family at their home in the capital. Seated beside him is Mrs. Hoover. Standing are Herbert Hoover, Jr., (left), Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., and Allan H. Hoover.

Vice President Elect

This drawing of Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, vice-president elect, was made from the official photograph of Senator Curtis adopted by the Republican National committee for campaign purposes. Senator Curtis took a very active part in the campaign, delivering numerous speeches, especially in the farm districts where he is popular.

The Younger Mr. Hoover

Allen Hoover, youngest son of the president-elect, was active in behalf of his father's candidacy all during the campaign and he also worked in his father's headquarters at Kansas City during the convention which nominated him. The young man accompanied his father on most of the latter's speaking tours during the campaign. Do you think he looks like his dad?

The New First Lady of the Land

This is a recent photograph of Mrs. Herbert Clark Hoover who will preside over the White House after March 4.

The Victor and His Lady

Serene and confident while the campaign waged about them Mr. and Mrs. Hoover pursued the even tenor of their ways during the hectic days since early last spring. This photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover was taken at their home in Washington.

Where Hoover Was Nominated

While great crowds grew frantic in their enthusiasm Herbert Hoover was nominated by an overwhelming vote on the first ballot at the Republican National convention in this building in Kansas City last June. While Hoover's nomination was almost a foregone conclusion before the convention started, a lot of speechmaking and noise preceded the ballot which started Mr. Hoover on the way to the White House.

HOOVER KNOWS HOW TO GET THINGS DONE, COLLEGE HEAD SAYS

President Jordan of Leland Stanford Tells of President-elect's Youth

EDITOR'S NOTE: As Chancellor of Stanford University, Dr. David Starr Jordan, one of America's foremost educators, came into intimate personal contact with Herbert Hoover during the young man's college days. Here are presented Dr. Jordan's own recollections of Hoover, the student-engineer.

BY DAVID STARR JORDAN, Chancellor Emeritus, Stanford University

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.) Palo Alto, Calif.—When Stanford University was organized in 1891, Herbert Hoover, then 19 years old, was living in Portland, Oregon, and was studying by himself at night in a tiny room at the back of a store where he worked.

I have been told that his Quaker uncle in Salem had charge of funds left him by his parents which he could have to prepare for the Quaker college at Newburg. But he was determined to go to Stanford and so decided to make his own way and carry out his own plan.

In the summer of 1891, when Stanford was getting ready to open, I asked Joseph Swain, newly elected professor of mathematics and later president of Swarthmore college, to go through the northwest to hold entrance examinations for students who might want to come our way. In Portland, Herbert Hoover went to see him.

Swain was a Quaker, too, and a good one, but he understood why the boy should want more thorough training than he could get at Newburg.

HOOVER, HANDY MAN
Naturally, Hoover's preparation was not adequate for Stanford; but Swain was so impressed with him that he said he would see that he was admitted to Stanford in October if he could get down to Palo Alto and go coaching in subjects where he was most deficient.

Hoover lost no time in reaching the campus. He went to Adelante Villa, a preparatory school for girls which was to be opened on the campus by Misses Lucy Fletcher and Eleanor Pearson, both from the Annex at Harvard.

There Hoover did odd jobs, I suppose, to pay for coaching, and for board and lodging. Later, when Encina Hall was nearly finished, I assigned him to room 18, and he was the first occupant of the dormitory.

Hoover's ability to get things done soon began to appear. He never had a great deal of extra money but he quickly showed that he knew much more about handling money than most men who had it.

He took a laundry agency and also became a handy man for Dr. Branner in the department of geology. His "college activities" were grouped around his valuable services in straightening out the student body finances, quite a job because nobody here had ever been concerned with such matters.

Hoover's system is substantially the one in use today, a model of order and effectiveness.

After the college fraternities came in, they tried to band together to control the political offices, just as many of them used to do in eastern colleges. There was a time when that seemed to be the prime objective of fraternities.

Their activities at Stanford led to the combination known as "The Big Six," made up of Lester Hindle, Herbert Hoover and Herbert Hicks, who together led an aggressive group of "barbarians" which threw the fraternities out of political power on the campus, after which college honors were based rather on personal fitness.

As I recollect Hoover at that time, he was a quiet and almost retiring youngster, apparently shy of girls until he met Lou Henry, of Monterey, who took a degree of geology and who married him in 1898. She collaborated with him in a monumental work of technical character, the translation of Agricola's "De Re Metallica" from the crabbed medieval Latin.

It is interesting that Hoover should have undertaken this task, because composition was his great stumbling-block at college, at least until he had something to say. I recall that the committee decided to pass him at last in freshman English mainly because it was claimed that the university could hardly refuse to graduate one who wrote such excellent theses in his major subject and who was reported to be the best student in the department.

In more recent years he has acquired a certain literary finish, but apparently even as undergraduate he could express himself admirably on a familiar theme.

"HOOVER LUCK"
One used to hear frequent references to "Hoover's luck." The only "Hoover luck," according to Dr. Branner, is what came by staying persistently with what he was doing, for he found, both in China and in Europe, difficulties of the most discouraging type.

He was bombed by a German in crossing from Belgium to London. He once lost almost his entire fortune (up to that date) through the defalcation of a partner and had to start all over again.

Among mining men he was noted for his ability to buy only those mines that paid in the end.

He knew first how to get the facts about mines, and then he organized those he bought so that they did pay. That ability enabled him to command a very big salary (said to be $100,000 in 1908.)

When Hoover was graduated, he was recommended by Dr. Branner to Jules Janin, the mining expert of San Francisco, a Frenchman with an international reputation.

Janin agreed and Hoover put in had no knowledge of typing, but he only said that of Janin would let him have about a week's time he would be ready to begin.

Janin agreed and Hoover put in several days preliminary practice on the typewriter and then held down the job to perfection.

That gave him his contacts with the mining world, and some time later when an English firm wanted an American mining expert to go to

Hoover as a Youth in College

Australia, Janin recommended Hoover for the position.

One of the requirements was that the man must not be under thirty-five years of age. Hoover was in his twenties, so on the way to London he grew a beard. When he reported for duty his new employer exclaimed, "How young you Americans look!"

But Hoover made good in spite of his youth, and by the time he was thirty-three his salary as director and controller of many mines seemed to me, unprecedented.

A GREAT READER
One distinctive thing about Herbert Hoover is his ability to absorb information. He is a great reader. There is always a pile of books by his bed.

He has gathered about him always men who know their subjects. He has an uncanny ability to sift data and facts from books or from the verbal or written reports of his associates, and to remember them on short notice.

It is this skill in marshaling facts and in selecting and inspiring men which have been the greatest contributing factors in the making of Herbert Hoover.

Like many other people, Mrs. Jordan and I remember with great pleasure the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover at the "Red house," their London residence for some years.

When they rented the place, the Hoovers took over a hundred-year lease still containing a clause by which the lessee promised not to allow his cows "to wander in the lane leading to High street" (Kensington), the "lane" now being Horn-ton street, closely built up on both sides.

A RALLYING PLACE
"The Red House" was a rallying place for interesting people, friends of the Hoovers. For one thing it was a center for mining engineers, especially Americans from all over the world, men who knew Hoover or had

ANTI-SALOON GROUP "VINDICATED" SAYS LEAGUE'S CHIEFTAIN

Washington—(AP)—F. V. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, issued a statement late Tuesday night declaring that the result of the election is a "thorough vindication of the Anti-Saloon league which was bitterly attacked by Governor Smith throughout the campaign."

He said "in other countries throughout the world Hoover's election will be accepted as proof that prohibition is to continue as the permanent policy of America in dealing with the liquor traffic."

worked with him. And most of the Englishmen who came there was exceedingly able.

I don't recall having met a professional politician there at any time. Naturally Hoover took no part in the political life of that country.

I recall that once when someone asked him how he liked London, he replied: "I like London well enough but it is so far away from everything."

His mining interests centered financially in London, but he traveled much of the time to Burma, to Turkestan, to Australia, to China and to Russia.

His method is to get all the facts available bearing on a situation and then decide what to do. He seldom talks in advance about his plans, but he never has failed to carry through anything he has undertaken. Every one who has worked with him or under him can be fairly said to worship him.

HOOVER LOOKS TO SMALL GROUP FOR POLITICAL ADVICE

Friends of Long Standing Guided President-elect During Campaign

Washington—(AP)—Small indeed is the coterie of men to whom Herbert Hoover turned for political advice in his career. Singularly enough nearly all are personal friends of long standing, some of whom were associated with him in his work overseas during and after the world war.

In the forefront of this little circle stand William J. Donovan, of New York, assistant to the attorney general, and James Francis Burke, of Pennsylvania, general counsel of the republican national committee. Both are Catholics.

The others are George Barr Baker, director of publicity in the Coolidge campaign four years ago; George Akerson, personal assistant to the President-elect; Mark L. Requa, California business man, and Thomas T. C. Gregory, San Francisco lawyer.

Hoover and Donovan met overseas, where each attained to fame, one in humanitarian enterprises and the other as "the fighting colonel" of the famous old Sixty-ninth regiment to New York. They continued the friendship in this country and when the then secretary of commerce began his active campaign for the republican nomination he frequently called upon the assistant to the attorney general for counsel. Burke has been helping to steer the political ship of the republican party in presidential campaigns for more than 30 years.

The association between Hoover and Baker began back in the days when Hoover was chairman of the Commission for the Relief of the Belgians. Baker served as secretary to the commission and subsequently as personal secretary to Hoover. He, too, has had long experience in politics and is adviser in matters of publicity as well as in dealing with the foreign language press. Requa and Hoover are friends of many years standing, the California oil man having been as-

ELEANOR EARLY

THIS HAS HAPPENED
SYBIL THORNE, prominent in Boston society, permits a ship-board acquaintance, RICHARD EUSTIS, to make violent love to her. He finally begs her to marry him.

Sybil is on her way to Havana with MABEL BLAKE, a social worker. Before sailing she promised CRAIG NEWELL, considered the most desirable bachelor in Boston, a decision upon her return.

Craig loves her devotedly and there is a sort of engagement between them. To please her dying father, Sybil had consented to marry Craig, but following Mr. Thorne's death the affair was kept secret and no announcement had been made. Sybil still believes herself in love with JOHN LAWRENCE, who went to France with the A. E. F. when she was only 18—and never returned.

The marriage of her brother, TAD, adds to Sybil's worries, for she distrusts the pretty little girl he has wed. In order then to unravel her perplexities, she goes to Cuba and encounters Richard Eustis, who proceeds to make life more complicated.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XV

Mornings are dazzling things in Havana. The sun shone on castles and forts and houses of rainbow hue. It sparkled on the azure sea and the colored boats that rode the waves.

Sybil and Mabel stood at the rail, spellbound by the beauty of it. And when they had caught their breath, they laughed aloud for very joy.

Natives put out in boats to greet them and sailors on the lower deck scrambled for little white cards that were tossed aboard.

"What are they?" asked Sybil.

The purser, passing, handed her a bit of pasteboard.

"Marguerite Fernandez," she read aloud, "Nine Economia, Arriba, Una rubia."

"What does it mean?"

"Oh, Senorita Fernandez lives at number nine Economia Street, upstairs. Una rubia means she is a blond."

"Bad women fascinate me," Mabel confided. "I've always been so darn good, myself."

The purser laughed.

"Keep your eyes open," he advised, "and you'll be fascinated plenty."

"I wonder where Rich is?" murmured Sybil. "He must have forgotten he was planning to marry me this morning."

"Sib! What do you mean?"

"Honestly. It seems that captains are like ministers on the sea—notaries, or justices, or something. Rich thought it would be romantic to be married in the harbor."

"Hello, Sweetheart!" Eustis came up behind them, suave and smiling, long-stemmed roses in his hand.

"Hello, Mabel." With a flourish he bestowed his flowers. "All the way from Boston and still fresh. The steward says he puts aspirin in the water. Will they do, my darling, for a bridal bouquet?"

Sybil surveyed him humorously, her nose in their fragrance, her eyes lifted in mocking gaiety. "Imbecile!"

she retorted. "Don't pay any attention to him, Mab."

Eustis laughed as one humoring a stubborn child. "The captain's shining brass buttons, darling," he chided. "You mustn't spoil the party. You'll be Sybil's maid of honor. Mab. And the first mate wants to be best man."

"Maid of honor nothing!" Mabel turned a scornful back.

Richard regarded her soberly. "Jealous?" he sighed and began exploring his pockets. "I've a little trinket somewhere. Ah, here we are." He held up a pair of long earrings. Little golden discs strung on ends.

"Oh, they're beautiful!" Sybil reached for them eagerly and when she held them in the dazzling light they sparkled like distilled sunshine. "Lovely, lovely things!" she cried. "Where did you get them, Rich?"

"Come for a walk," he invited, "and I'll tell you."

"We're going up on the boat deck, Mab. See you here when we come back?"

"See that you come back!" she admonished him curtly.

"Mabel's awful upset because I didn't go to bed last night," explained Sybil as they sauntered off. "I don't blame her either. She feels sort of responsible, you see."

"Never mind Mab!" he exclaimed. "How about getting married this morning?"

"Oh, Richard, stop!"

They were on the deserted upper deck and when he tried to take her in his arms, she pushed him petulantly away.

"For goodness' sake," she cried, "let's talk about something else."

"But, darling," he insisted, "you love me! And love and marriage are twins in your sweet mind, Child."

"No, I don't either," she informed him coolly. "At least I don't think I do. And, anyhow, I didn't quite finish being honest with you this morning."

"I left a boy at home, Rich. I'm sort of engaged to him. He expects to marry me when I go back. When I let you kiss me, I never dreamed you were going to ask me to marry you. Forgive me, Rich. It was a sweet little romance that bloomed on a moonlit sea, and died, in the light of day."

"But, Sybil—you love me, dear. Here—I'll show you."

"Don't Rich. That isn't love. Suppose some perfectly wicked creature kissed me—and did as nice as that. Suppose it was a pitch black night and I couldn't see him. But I suppose I got him under a big arc light, and discovered that he was absolutely villainous looking and shabby and dirty and everything."

"Then suppose next morning I read in the papers that he had beaten his wife, and run away from his seven hungry children. I'd hate him, wouldn't I? I'd loathe and despise him. But just the same he might have thrilled me with his kisses and I might have whispered to him 'I love you.' But you COULDN'T call that love, could you, Rich? It's sort of the same, you see."

"But, Sybil, you foolish child, I'm not absolutely villainous looking, am

I? Nor shabby, nor dirty? And I haven't a wife to beat, nor seven hungry children at all!"

"Well, perhaps my argument wasn't very good. But I know what I meant, even if I can't say it."

"Does that man at home thrill you the way I do, Sybil?"

"No-o-o."

"But, darling, don't you see that's because you don't love him as you love me?"

"Oh, he's much nicer than you are, Rich. He hasn't all those horrid ideas."

"How do you know he hasn't?"

"I just know—that's all. And he's more patient than you would ever be, and tenderer and more dependable."

"How do you know I'm not patient and tender and dependable?"

Oh, Sybil, give me a chance!"

"How about mine?"

"You said, yourself, the world is full of girls that are nicer and prettier and smarter than I am. Go pick yourself a knockout—and good luck to you, Rich. You're wonderful at making love. But you'd make a rotten husband. You even admit it. Now, please—" she regarded him severely—"the whole thing's over—and we won't talk any more about it."

Mabel was coming to join them.

"I'm sick and tired," she complained, "of being deserted. The way you two run off! You ought to hear the things people are saying about you."

Richard was holding Sybil's hand, pressing her fingers, one after the other, idly.

"Sybil!" he exclaimed, "that sap-phire circle! I never saw it before."

"I don't believe I've ever worn it," she explained. "I don't particularly like it. Why—do you?"

"It's the very thing," he announced, "for a wedding ring. Here dear—let me have it."

"Richard Eustis, are you mad?"

"Mad!" he cried. "Oh, very, very mad, my darling!"

And, suddenly—as though it were a magic thing—a strangeness was born within her that, coursing through her body, made her tremble.

PACKERS TO PLAY LAST HOME GAME

"Red" Smith and Cyre, Former Bays Play on Invaders' Team

Green Bay—The Green Bay Packers, by far the best team which has ever represented this ancient city in the National league, will bid farewell to the home lot and to the Bay fans this Sunday when they battle the New York Yankees. If good weather prevails as it has the past two Sundays it is expected that a record breaking crowd will be there to witness the game and to give the Packers a real rousing send off for their Eastern trip, the results of which will determine, whether or not the Blues will be successful in their quest for the championship of the National league.

The Yankees this year have not "hung up any impressive strings of wins but one victory which they have won certainly was impressive. They hold the distinction of being the only team in the league this season to defeat the Yellow Jackets and they did in decisive fashion, the count being 13 to 0. The game shows that the Yanks have a lot of possibilities and it certainly would be disappointing to Green Bay fans and the Packers as well should the Yanks decide to give the Blues the same treatment they accorded the Yellow Jackets.

Two former Green Bay players are in the Yankee lineup and one of them "Red" Smith has been basking considerably in the limelight so this season. Despite their defeat which the Bears handed the Yanks yesterday Smith turned in a great performance making one 70-yard run and another 30 yards besides catching several other passes for good gains. The other player is Hector Cyre, former lineman who has not played this season because of injuries but is reported to be the first class shape now and ready to give his former team mates a trimming.

Michalske, given unanimous rating last season on the All Pro team is also with the Yanks again this year and is playing the same aggressive game which earned his spots for him last season. "Doc" Grange has continued to do great work as fullback and Ray Flaherty has been holding down one of the end berths in the same style of the past two seasons which means that he is still one of the best things in the pro game. Gibby Welch, last year the greatest performer in collegiate circles has assumed "Red" Grange's role with the Yanks and has a remarkable record behind him. In every game this year except the tilt Sunday with the Bears Welch has scored at least one touchdown and in yesterday's fracas he performed only a few minutes on account of an injured leg which will be in perfect shape for the game here next Sunday.

LOWLY SCRUB KICKED THE WINNING GOAL

Iowa City—Irving Nelson, a blond young man whose hair will not mind being cut, was one of the greatest high school football, basketball and baseball players ever developed in Omaha. He went to the University of Iowa hopeful that he would become one of those great big conference stars but he found that more than a reputation is needed to make a Big Ten varsity. In his sophomore year this fall he became so discouraged with his football prospects that he turned in his suit and set his mind on the basketball squad.

Rollie Williams, assistant football coach, persuaded him to return to the squad the day before the Minnesota game and when that important game started he had his old place on the bench.

There arrived the situation in the game when Iowa scored a touchdown and tied Minnesota and the game could be won by converting the point after touchdown.

Burt Ingwersen, the varsity coach, leaning around the bench and then nearly capped the young man when he ordered:

"Get in there Nelson and kick for that point!"

Nelson got in and kicked the goal and won the game.

Highs And Kaukauna Meet Next Saturday

There's a battle in the offing Saturday that has been carried on for so many years that even the oldest citizen can hardly remember the first one. It's the annual gridiron battle between Appleton and Kaukauna high school football teams and it will take place at Kaukauna starting at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

But as far as Appleton high school is concerned the boys aren't worrying about traditional battles and are concentrating their interest and activities on the game which will settle the Fox river valley football championship, a week from Saturday. That game is against East Green Bay at Green Bay when some of the finest high school football in the state will be on tap.

The Kaws may prove a worthy foe Saturday for they are champions of the northeastern Wisconsin fall conference and that honor must mean something. However, the youngster down river haven't much in the way of a heavy line and the bushes in the Appleton wall are expected to trample all over their opponents.

They won't take much chance with his veterans during the fray and after they run up a fair majority may jerk most of them and let the other members of the squad do something to earn their keep. Shields has a couple chaps among his reserves who need a bit of experience and Saturday's game will be a good time to give it to them.

Monday's drill for the highs was like others during the season, a verbal rebash of the previous Saturday's battle with the coach telling what was wrong with the things the boys thought perfect. Tuesday evening the reserves put on an impersonation act this time representing East Green Bay and to their credit it must be said they worked the Red plays with nice gains.

After a long session on the Red Devils' formations the first squad was sent through a few minutes of signal practice and then sent to the bushes. Darkness had made further practice out of the question. The last few minutes of practice were spent under the arch lights with the ghost ball.

DRIVE IOWA SQUAD TO BEAT OHIO STATE

Buckeyes' Title Hopes at Stake Next Saturday Afternoon

Iowa City—Of all the ten weeks of practice which the University of Iowa football team will labor through this fall, this is the most critical.

For the unbeaten Hawkeyes are completing their research into the undefeated Ohio State eleven's style of play and strengthening their own attack. Unless the Buckeyes are beaten, all of the weeks of drill will have been in vain as far as a clear Western conference championship is concerned.

The Hawkeyes will depart Thursday for the eastern boundary of the conference and at Columbus will meet Ohio State in the feature game of the west Saturday.

No damage was done to the Iowans by the scrappy South Dakota eleven last Saturday. A miscellaneous collection of regulars and reserves downed the regulars, 13 to 0, making no serious attempt to display championship form.

THREE TEAMS MAY TIE

Strange things are happening in the Big Ten this fall, and the situation is such that once-defeated teams may tie for the title. If Iowa should lose to Ohio State then defeat Wisconsin and Michigan, while Illinois was trimming Chicago and Ohio State, the Illinois, Hawkeyes and Buckeyes would split the championship, each with four of five games won.

Thanks to the cleverly drawn schedule, Iowa will have the full strength of an especially keyed team to send against the Buckeyes. The South Dakota game, following the terrific battle with Minnesota, provided the necessary let-down and also gave Mayes McLain, Indian fullback and Mike Farroh, the burly blocking halfback, opportunity to recuperate. McLain has been careful of his gashed hand and Farroh is regaining strength sapped by a heavy cold which bordered upon influenza.

Exactly five yards on each attempt from scrimmage has been averaged by the Iowans in the five games. An even 1,800 yards is the fruit of 256 offensive drives. Oran Pace, sophomore substitute halfback, has made 418 yards in 46 trials, averaging nine yards and drawing far ahead of McLain, who has 276 yards after 64 trials. The sprinter also is the Big Ten's leading scorer with 48 points, although playing hardly half of the time.

In the South Dakota game, Willis Glasgow, the shifty halfback, brought his season's total of 267 in 74 trials. Paul Armit, quarterback, is credited with 160 yards in 24 ball-carrying efforts.

While the varsity battles the Buckeyes, the reserves will play Notre Dame's seconds on Iowa field. The Hawkeyes defeated Indiana reserves, 13 to 6, in the only game played so far this fall.

IT'S A LOCAL TALENT TEAM

All members of the varsity squad at Florida are residents of the state. Fifteen of the 33 varsity men are from either Tampa or Jacksonville.

BLOOMER AGAIN CARRYING BALL IN SCRIMMAGE

Vikings Centering Attention on Carroll Game, Nov. 17

Franny Bloomer carried the ball for the first time in two weeks, Tuesday night in scrimmage.

Not much information in that statement to football fans who don't know the Viking's weakness but surely fine news to the folk who realize the cocky little quarterback is more than half the Lawrence offense.

And what he did to the Vikings, generally, was almost marvelous. Their tackles worked better, their guards worked and as a matter of fact everything went over in better shape and the they again began to look like they did the week before they met Marquette.

But the Vikings aren't pointing especially for the game they have Saturday with Northwestern college on Whiting field, they're prepping along fine lines for the Carroll game a week from Saturday and the one which they will give everything to win their homecoming game.

Coach Rassmussen hasn't said much about the coming fracas but he knows he must win and whether he chooses to show his full strength or just give the reserves a bit of training is a question. He may try to experiment on line positions and his backs, but one thing is absolutely certain. He will not attempt to run up a score at the sacrifice of men and he will expect absolute perfection from the youngsters he sends into the fray.

Tuesday evening, while most other folks were wondering how many votes Al and Herb were getting, the Vikings went through a long scrimmage session with the reserved and freshmen furnishing opposition. Plays that hadn't functioned for the last two weeks again worked with regularity and when it was all over Razz wore a pleased look on his countenance.

The Vikes still are in a weakened condition, however and probably will not make next week. Voecks, guard around the sidelines and a few trips around the track were the extent of his workout. Tiny Krohn and Fritz Schauer weren't out at all. Tiny preferring to let his injured nose heal and Schauer resting up generally after the pummeling he received from the Redmen.

Tuesday's scrimmage put several more men on the casualty list. McJannet and Trankle colliding on one play and both taking a trip to the doctor to come back with patches over the injured members. A few minutes late a couple frosh followed suit, but they're not varsity men and can be sacrificed. Tuffy Vincent who didn't fair well at Ripon played for a few minutes Tuesday but he wasn't in condition for much riding and was taken out after two or three plays.

Greater credit is due the above when signaled out on a winning team for Campion has won every game and has piled up a score of 169 to its opponents. 6. Among the teams which Campion beat are Edgewood high of Madison, St. Ambrose of Davenport, Iowa, Pio Nono of Milwaukee and Columbia Academy of Dubuque.

BADGERS HAVE HAD EDGE IN CHI GAMES

Rivalry Is One of Best Known in Big Ten Football Circles

Madison—Chicago and Wisconsin, ancient rivals, will meet here next Saturday as a feature of the latter's annual Homecoming. This event will mark the first invasion of the Maroons in more than fifteen years.

Heretofore, the Badgers have at ways played Chicago at Stagg field, and this fact, together with the traditional rivalry between the two teams, should add color to the homecoming battle.

Wisconsin holds a slight edge over the Maroons in former years. The Badgers have annexed fourteen wins, while Chicago has won on thirteen occasions. Four games have ended in ties. As the Stagmen are but one game down they will be fighting to knot the count over the thirty-two year span of relationship.

Recent years have been more profitable for Wisconsin. The Badgers have won four out of the last six games. Chicago upset Wisconsin last year and a scoreless tie was played in 1924. The Thistlethwaite team in the thick of the conference race, hopes to avenge the defeat of a year ago when Chicago won 12-7.

The Cardinal and the Maroon have been bitter rivals for years. Upsets have been frequent in many of the historic battles which have been fought between the two elevens.

Wisconsin homecomers will have a royal treat this year with the Badgers and Maroons engaging in one of their characteristic struggles.

The closeness of recent scores between the two teams is indicative of the rivalry which exists. Pre-game odds are usually of little value in picking a winner when a Wisconsin team meets Chicago.

BELOIT HARRIERS TO MEET RIPON SATURDAY

Beloit—The second cross-country race of the season for Beloit harriers will be held with Ripon in connection with the Ripon-Beloit football game this Saturday at Ripon. Beloit is relying chiefly on the ability of Al Gansinsky and Dick Warren, both of whom have had three years of experience and have been winners in local contests held here. The third and last event in the harvest calendar will be the turkey race November 24 in connection with the Coo game here.

APPLETON BOYS STAR ON CAMPION ELEVEN

Campion Academy of Peairie du Chien, Ind. justly feel proud of the achievements of the two Pfeiffer brothers of Appleton. In Saturday's game against Columbia of Dubuque, Campion trimmed Columbia to the tune of 31 to 0. The first march to victory was due to Edward Pfeiffer who blocked a drop kick on Columbia's 9 yard line. Richard Pfeiffer, known more commonly among his classmates as "Butch" is mainly responsible for the remarkable holding capacity of the Campion line. Ed Pfeiffer holds down the center berth and "Butch" the position of left guard. Bud Plank an other Appleton boy is also on the squad as guard.

Greater credit is due the above when signaled out on a winning team for Campion has won every game and has piled up a score of 169 to its opponents. 6. Few All-Americans On Pacific Coast Teams

Los Angeles, Calif. — The Pacific coast elevens, usually good for one or two All-American football stars each season, have but two slim chances for 1929.

The two prospects are Lloyd Thomas of the University of Southern California and "Bill" Hoffman, fullback and captain of Stanford.

Thomas is the youngest of four brothers, all of whom have attained gridiron fame.

The oldest brother, John, was the star on Coach Stagg's Chicago squad in 1921 and 1922, being named in 1922 on Walter Camp's All-America eleven.

Harry, the second brother, was one of the mainstays of the Chicago team in 1922 and 1923.

ST. JOSEPH GRIDDERS ARE IDLE THIS WEEK

Life this week is pretty much a ramp for members of St. Joseph junior high football team. The youngsters haven't a game for Sunday and therefore won't drill much until next week. The boys are feeling pretty good over their victory last Sunday over Cathedral junior high team of Green Bay but they haven't anything that looks like overconfidence about them. They had a narrow escape in the closing minutes of the fray and if they had any conceit it all passed with that long forward pass which enabled the Bays to count a touch down.

All the youngsters are in good physical condition, none of them having been injured except Weber. Guard. He has suffered with a bad hip all season and a few kicks in Sunday's fracas caused him plenty of agony. The week's drill probably will be confined to limbering up exercises and perhaps a few new plays.

Wisconsin Alums Flock Back to Madison for Homecoming

Madison—A new record in football ticket sales was established at Wisconsin when the entire stadium was sold out on Monday morning for the homecoming Wisconsin-Chicago battle here Saturday. This will create a crowd of more than 42,500 people.

The handful of tickets offered on open sale Monday morning were not nearly sufficient to accommodate the fans who stood in line at the ticket office when the doors were opened at 8 o'clock. Indications are that thousands of people will be unable to gain admittance to see the undefeated Badgers in their Homecoming game.

Ticket manager George W. Lewis is doing his utmost to increase the seating capacity at Camp Randall stadium by rushing the construction of several hundred temporary seats.

"Even though it be at a financial loss to us," Lewis stated, "we shall do everything possible to provide reservations for all who wish to see Saturday's game."

"All temporary bleachers that are thrown up at this late hour will be purely an accommodation to the public."

Lewis finds it costs at least $2 per seat to erect wooden stands, which means the Badger department must stand a loss as the visiting team receives fifty per cent on every $3 ticket sold.

HOOVER'S HUMBLE BIRTHPLACE NOW BASKS IN GLORY

Iowans Who Knew Him "Way Back When" Tell of President-elect's Youth

BY SUE McNAMARA Associated Press Correspondent

West Branch, Iowa—(P)—Serenity and satisfaction prevail in this little Quaker village of 700 where Herbert Hoover was born, now that he has been nominated for President of the United States.

Plenty there are of the staunch Quaker faith who nod their heads quietly and say: "I told you so," because they have known Herbert Hoover since he was a little boy and know that he comes of the stock of which Presidents are made.

The birthplace of the man was a humble one-story frame cottage, but this has since been added to and the room where Herbert Hoover was born is now used as the kitchen. Roses buzz around the yellow June roses of the house, set at the edge of fertile rolling green prairie land and ploughed fields. Already tourists are leaving the main highway which goes through West Branch to pass into the side street which contains his birthplace.

PRESENT AT HOOVER'S BIRTH

A. W. Jackson, now an editor, but in the days of Herbert's boyhood, a printer, says that he has been "wielding his pen vigorously for the last ten years to make this home town boy President of the United States." Mr. Jackson's mother, Eliza Ann Jackson, was present when Hoover was born and wrapped him in his swaddling clothes. He has heard his father tell of Mrs. Jackson coming home one morning and saying: "Well, they've got a new boy at Jesse Hoover's house."

Hoover's father was a blacksmith and his mother a Quaker preacher. They had three children, Theodore, May and Herbert.

THROWN OUT OF SHOP

"Many a time I have seen our crabby old foreman throw Herbert and young Ray Wickersham, son of the editor of the West Branch Times, out of the office," recalls Mr. Jackson. "The two boys liked to

Here is Where Hoover First Saw Light

West Branch, Iowa, yesterday only a sleepy Quaker village, today has new meaning in the world. For as the birthplace of Herbert Hoover, old land marks associated with his boyhood are fast developing into shrines that attract townsmen and tourist. Upper right is the president-elect's birthplace, a one-story frame cottage, but now the kitchen of the house that since has been rebuilt. Lower right is Mrs. J. K. Carran, whom Hoover refers to as his "sweet-faced patient teacher." Butler's lunch room is another landmark, for here is where the "returns" come in, and Hoover proprietor remarked that he once "licked the Hoover." Two recent pictures of Mr. and Mrs. Hoover are at the left, taken at their present home in California.

play around the shop. They always came back after they had been thrown out.

"My parents lived on the adjoining block to the Hoovers," Jesse Hoover, the father of Herbert, gave me the first dollar I ever earned for assisting him in his blacksmith shop.

Looking back on it now I think my own father furnished the dollar to keep me out of mischief and to keep me away from the old swimming hole which Herbert later discovered also.

At the other end of town can be seen the well kept cemetery where Hoover's father and mother are buried. He was left an orphan boy at age of ten. He lived with an uncle and aunt at West Branch for a time. The aunt, whom Hoover still refers to as Aunt Millie, now lives at Quarr, Iowa. Later Herbert was taken to Oregon to live with an uncle, Dr. H. J. Minthorne.

HOOVER'S PATIENT TEACHER

Mrs. J. K. Carran lives in this house at the north end of town and on the wall of her living room she has a framed, autographed picture of Mr. Hoover, which he gave her at the time of his visit to West Branch in 1922 when Mrs. Carran presented him to the crowd at the dedication of West Branch's new school house.

In a recent address to the Iowa Society in Washington Mr. Hoover referred to Mrs. Carran as "the sweet faced, patient teacher who drilled into me the foundations of the present knowledge."

"Herb was a good boy," says his former teacher. "A little extra. He was such a busy little fellow that I had to advance him a grade ahead of the rest of his class. One of his noticeable characteristics which he has carried into manhood was keeping still when he had nothing to say. Even as a youngster he could express himself on any subject without talking for the sake of talking. He would rather listen to the other fellow if he had anything worth while to say and if not Herbert always had something to think about and the same is true of Mr. Hoover today. Another fine trait in his character is gratitude. Now that he is famous and wealthy he does not forget those who befriended him when he was a homeless orphan boy."

This statement of Mrs. Carran is proven by a touching incident which just occurred in West Branch. Dr. William Walker, the man whom Hoover himself credits with having first gotten him interested in geology, died at the age of 87 only a few days before the Republican convention opened. He was buried in a suit purchased with money sent him by Hoover.

SOURCE OF HIS INSPIRATION

In a dusty old cabinet in the shabby little parlor in which some of the funeral flowers still stood, repose the stones and fossils which first gave Herbert Hoover an idea of the wonders of the earth's formation and far lands to conquer. That old cabinet of specimens in the village doctor's office had a great deal to do with the colorful career which has now brought him close to the White House. He used to spend hours in front of it when a boy, reading the labels, studying the queer formations. Then he would go down to the Burlington tracks which ran through the town and hunt for mica and agates and crystal among the gravel.

And when Hoover returned to West Branch several years ago he went to see Mr. Walker. His observing eyes must have noted the falling strength of his old friend, the worn carpet, the faded wall paper, the worried look on Mrs. Walker's face. Anyway a bunch of crisp green bills found their way into Dr. Walker's hands after Mr. Hoover had gone and more money followed from time to time, enough to ease the old doctor's last days and make him proud to parade Main street in that new suit.

GOVERNMENTS SPAR FOR COMMISSIONS TO AID SMALL NATIONS

Reason for Competition Is Likelihood of Business Which May Result

BY KIRK L. SIMPSON

Washington—Usually there is a little sparring between the big governments when one of the little fellows decides it needs a special commission of technical instructors for a time to help get its navy, army or air force into satisfactory shape.

There are several reasons for competition among the big fellows as to which shall supply the demand. For one thing, there are economic aspects. If a neighboring government turns to the United States to borrow officers of the army, navy or air corps, for instance, it's quite natural that a market of sorts for army, navy or air corps equipment made in America may be developed.

Technical commissions are commercial agents in a sense. Then, too, it is not regarded as desirable by any government that technical instruction of this sort in a nearby state should be in the hands of officers and experts of any third power.

AIDS NEIGHBORS

Washington has repeatedly shown this desire to furnish expert assistance to the Latin-American republics which need it. There are a number of American naval or military commissions of long standing in the countries to the south and army, navy and air schools in this country are opened freely to officers picked by their governments for special post-graduate courses in their own particular branches of the profession of arms.

What inducements governments competing for the spending of such commissions may offer is never very clearly known. There seems at present, however, a growing feeling among Latin-American statesmen that American naval and army officers are of a type very desirable for their purposes and inclined to take such assignments not as pleasurable jaunts into the social activities of the inviting states by a matter of hard, consistent work toward the improvement of the methods and training of the forces to which they act as advisory instructors.

YANKEE PEP PRAISED

By way of illustration, a quotation from a letter sent from one Latin-American statesman to a colleague in Europe who evidently had urged employment of naval instructors from across the Atlantic rather than the United States is enlightening.

"I prefer the Yankee system of education," this official wrote. "My conviction in the matter grows stronger when I apply the Biblical phrase, 'By their fruits ye shall know them.'"

"When in the modest, colonial streets of (name of country deleted) you see a dandy-like youth, with a bob, using rouge and hair oil, you can be sure he comes from (name of European city deleted). On the other hand, when you see a robust youngster, without a vest, who keeps his trousers up with a coarse belt, instead of sports and can give a punch that would make a hole in the (name of a great fortification left out), you know without fear of mistake he comes from Yankeland."

"In this connection, I recall a story I read some time ago to the effect that when a Latin visited Niagara Falls he dedicated to the sight the most lyric and vibrating poem whereas a Saxon, another visitor to the falls, invented a dynamo to profit by their motive force."

SOME 'HAUL'

Liverpool—A police raid on the Blundell Members Club Co., Ltd., here recently, brought the arrest of 120 men charged with gambling. Arresting officers sent out an SOS for ten prison vans to haul the prisoners to headquarters.

It is said that at least two percent of human beings associate a particular color with each sound they hear and sometimes this extends to the names of days of the week.

By way of illustration, a quotation from a letter sent from one Latin-American statesman to a colleague in Europe who evidently had urged employment of naval instructors from across the Atlantic rather than the United States is enlightening.

"I prefer the Yankee system of education," this official wrote. "My conviction in the matter grows stronger when I apply the Biblical phrase, 'By their fruits ye shall know them.'"

"When in the modest, colonial streets of (name of country deleted) you see a dandy-like youth, with a bob, using rouge and hair oil, you can be sure he comes from (name of European city deleted). On the other hand, when you see a robust youngster, without a vest, who keeps his trousers up with a coarse belt, instead of sports and can give a punch that would make a hole in the (name of a great fortification left out), you know without fear of mistake he comes from Yankeland."

"In this connection, I recall a story I read some time ago to the effect that when a Latin visited Niagara Falls he dedicated to the sight the most lyric and vibrating poem whereas a Saxon, another visitor to the falls, invented a dynamo to profit by their motive force."

CURTIS HAS BEEN IN PUBLIC OFFICE FOR OVER 40 YEARS

Vice President Elect Served More Than Thirty-six Years in Congress

Washington—(P)—Beginning with his election as county attorney of Shawnee county at the age of 23, Charles Curtis has been a continuous office holder ever since.

He will have fallen just short of half a century of public service by 1932, and only for three years since he came voting age in 1881 has he been out of political office.

Only four years of that service was rendered out of congressional life in Washington. His accession to senate honors in 1907 came on the heels of eight consecutive terms in the house.

If there is anything he does know about the ways of Washington or of congress or of party politics, experience could not teach him. There are few who will not admit that in eight terms in the house and four in the senate over a period when Kansas politics frequently were highly turbulent is prima facie evidence of sound political judgment.

Probably it is this striking record, coupled with his geographical situation in the corn belt and possibly the touch of Indian ancestry that makes his Americanism actually 100 per cent plus, as the phrase is generally used, that gave Curtis his chance at Kansas City.

His vice-presidential eligibility was in grave doubt there for a time when his arrival greeting to a Hoover monopolized convention gathering was generally construed as questioning Mr. Hoover's own claims to first place on the ticket. Nominally at least they were rivals for that high honor. In the aftermath of the Hoover tidal wave that swept the convention, however, the victor seemed satisfied to let prenomination bygone be bygone, indeed and to join forces with this staunch party wheel horse and congressional veteran.

As Republican whip and later majority leader in the senate, the Kansas has been a vital cog in party machinery.

He developed methods entirely his own of handling difficult situations. Tremendous responsibilities to get through essential bills rested upon him as majority leader. The fate of his party might rest on his success, yet he faced in the last session or two danger to the majority legislative program every day, every hour. It was menaced not only from the democratic side of the aisle, the minority side by only a handful of votes, but also from within the republican senatorial ranks. He could never count certainly on the voting solidarity of his own side.

His post of command was the seat on the extreme left flank, rear of the republican sector, just in front of the big main doors that let in all the drafts and noise of the central corridor of the huge building. They never bothered Curtis. It was his habit rarely to be off the senate floor, although his participation in debates on issues as distinct from parliamentary procedure was infrequent. When a measure of pressing importance was in the offing, more often than not Curtis could be observed on a couch at the back of the room talking quietly with this or that senator from either side of the aisle. He knew them and their hobbies and habits. It was Curtis' way of greasing the skids for the essential bill to come. There may have been a bit of log-rolling involved here and there in the good old fashioned way. What he could do to keep the legislative mill grinding at a satisfactory pace Curtis did quickly and with keen understanding of personal and political tangles complicating every subject discussed.

KOHLER IS PLEASED WITH ELECTION OF HERBERT HOOVER

Kohler—(P)—Walter J. Kohler, Wisconsin manufacturer who was successful in his quest for the governorship, expressed his satisfaction in the outcome of the presidential election in a telegram to Herbert Hoover Wednesday. The telegram read: "Wisconsin expresses its faith in Herbert Hoover by giving him its 13 electoral votes. In offering our congratulations upon your election we are at the same time extending our felicitations to the nation which will be assured a continuation of prosperity under the wise leadership and able administration of a great American."

Mrs. Kohler and I extend to you and Mrs. Hoover our heartfelt good wishes and prayers for your continued good health."

FIRST OCEAN FLIGHT ANNOUNCED IN 1799

Berlin—(P)—The newspaper Vossische Zeitung has published excerpts from its files of 1798 showing that women were forbidden to take part in balloon flying at that time in the belief that it was highly improper and physically injurious. The paper reprinted some amusing stories of the days when aeronautics was in its infancy.

They disclose that women did not heed the ban. A dispatch from Paris dated July 17, 1798, says that Citizeness Henry, 21 years old, accompanied a balloonist on a flight and gave a "fine example of courage."

Another message deals with the employment of balloons in the Netherlands war, and another described Napoleon's scheme to invade England by air.

On June 21, 1799, the balloonist Jean Pierre Blanchard announced that he would undertake a flight to the United States and said that he could make the voyage in eight days. The flight never took place.

In the same year a balloon descended in the early morning at the old Brandenburg Gate of Berlin. The crew were promptly locked up on the charge of vagrancy.

A WALKING RECORD London—A record walking mileage of 299,000 is credited to Miss Clay, Flintshire, who served as an auxiliary "postman" for 40 years. She recently retired under the age limit law, but says she could have gone on serving her territory for many years more.

The sixty-eighth motor lifeboat has just been added to the Royal National Lifeboat Institution's fleet off British shores.

KOHLER NEW TO POLITICS OF WISCONSIN

Wast't Known in Political Circles Until April De-gate Election

When Walter J. Kohler was drafted by the Green Bay convention to seek the Republican nomination for Governor, he was heralded as a "stranger to politics."

Today he stands as one of the most colorful political figures of the state whose rise from a novice to the governor's chair in the short space of eight months is without parallel in the history of Wisconsin.

Chosen to run as a delegate at large to the Republican national convention after the death of Andrew H. Dahl of LaCrosse, he was elected delegate with a vote second only to Senator Robert M. LaFollette and John F. Blaine, progressive Republican leaders. He entered the gubernatorial campaign confronted with two opponents in a situation in which some of his admirers regarded as hopeless. The campaign was climaxed by victory for Mr. Kohler in the September primary over Governor Fred R. Zimmerman, Congressman Joseph D. Beck, LaFollette progressive, and John Ferris of Milwaukee.

His election as the chief executive of the state for the next biennium comes at 53 years of age, after a successful career in business, which for the past 20 has found him the president of the Kohler company, one of the nationally known manufacturers in Wisconsin.

A business administration for Wisconsin has been the platform on which he successfully sought the nomination of his party and then the favor of the people in the election Tuesday.

His election marks the first governor drawn from the anti-progressive ranks of the Republican party since the war, when Emanuel L. Phillip, Milwaukee manufacturer and capitalist sat in the chief executive's chair.

Given the unanimous indorsement of the Green Bay conference of conservative Republicans, Mr. Kohler accepted the nomination and entered the race for the Republican nomination, gaining a victory at the polls in September by a majority of 22,000 over Mr. Beck.

A native of Sheboygan is married, and has four sons, John, Walter, Jr., Carl and three of whom are associated with their father in business, and Robert Kohler, a student at Yale.

He is a former member of the board of regents of the university, and served a time as president, and was granted an honorary degree in recognition of his services although not a college man. He has been prominently identified with the Wisconsin Conference of Social Work.

Although he was a novice to politics when he opened his campaign for governorship, Mr. Kohler was by no means unknown to the people of the state. In the artistic village of Kohler, Wis., he appeared as a highly successful business executive, possessing rather novel views on industrial development, long before his name was brought into state politics.

John M. Kohler, his father, was born in the Austrian Tyrol. He came to America as a child. His mother, Lilly Vollrath, was an American, the daughter of a pioneer Wisconsin family. The elder Kohler started a small iron working plant in Sheboygan. The son, with an ordinary public schooling behind him, went to work in the foundry plant. In 1899 a decision was made, based on the prediction that bathtubs were not to be a luxury in America. Cramped for space in Sheboygan, the plant was moved out of the city, four miles westward, and the village of Kohler established. The employees then numbered less than a hundred. Now more than 4,000 are employed.

Walter J. Kohler was married Nov. 3, 1900 to Charlotte Schroeder, who was teaching art in the Sheboygan public schools. Her parents resided in Kenosha. It was five years later that Mr. Kohler became president of the corporation.

Mr. Kohler might not have known the intricate workings of political machinery but he was not long in stating the reasons for his candidacy for Governor.

"I am in this campaign because I have become convinced that I can be of service to the state," was Mr. Kohler's reply to a question asking why he has in the campaign. "Wisconsin has been generous to me and my family."

Union Thanksgiving Day services for all protestant churches except Lutheran, probably will be held at the First Methodist church at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, Nov. 23, according to a decision arrived at by a special committee of ministers in charge of arrangements, which met at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning at the home of the Rev. E. M. Salter, the Rev. W. R. Wetzel, and the Rev. A. W. Panzlau.

It is expected that the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. H. S. Gately. Other ministers who will probably officiate are the Rev. E. F. Franz, and the Rev. Panzlau. Further announcements on the union services are to be made by the committee at a later date, according to the Rev. Wetzel.

Kohler village is perhaps the greatest evidence of his interest in his workmen. It is a decided departure from what most people regard as a factory town. It has the beauty of an exclusive residential suburb. Its streets are all paved and ornamentally lighted. There are parks, a theatre and excellent schools.

The houses are all owned and lived in by men employed by the Kohler company. This has been made possible through the fact that the Kohler Improvement company, of which Mr. Kohler is president, is a non-profit organization, building houses and selling them at cost.

Away from his office or home one may find Mr. Kohler riding one of the many fine horses he has at his stable. Riding is his favorite sport and it is said that he does not fear the high hurdles. But his sports are diversified. Sometime he is found on the baseball diamond and at other times he is playing a hard game on the bowling alleys.

"When its quitting time he's ready to have some fun out of life with the rest of us," said one shopman. "When we play baseball he doesn't get there with a lot of show and throw the first ball over. Not him. He goes behind the bat and catches and there's a lot worse catches than he is right now even though he's past 50."

He is an aviation enthusiast, has several planes and has many hours in the air to his credit as a passenger.

MRS. M'CORMICK IS ELECTED IN ILLINOIS

Wins Congressional Seat in Campaign Through Entire State

Chicago—(P)—The political precepts of her father, United States senator and maker of presidents, and her own astute political sense Wednesday won for Ruth Hanna McCormick a seat in congress. Coincidentally, it was the tenth anniversary of the election of her husband, the late Medill McCormick, to the United States senate.

When Mark Hanna determined to put William McKinley into the White House, he summoned his vast powers for organization and publicity and sent orators into every village and hamlet.

When his daughter determined to enter on a political career as a candidate for representative-at-large from Illinois, she took her cue into every one of the state's 102 counties.

This was her debut into public office, yet Mrs. McCormick is no beginner in public life. Now 47 years old, she began her political schooling at the Republican convention of 1896 at St. Louis, where her father achieved his ambition to bring about McKinley's nomination. She has attended every convention since. When Mark Hanna went to Washington as a senator, Ruth Hanna went along as his secretary. And when Medill McCormick was levated to the senate ten years ago, his wife stood by as his able counsellor.

Mrs. McCormick eliminated the veteran congressman, Richard Yates, at the primaries, but he was placed on the ticket besides her when his colleague, representative at large Henry L. Rathbone, died.

CALUMET-CO GIVES SMITH MAJORITY OF OVER 800 BALLOTS

Progressive Vote Is Thrown to Democratic Nominee for Safe Margin

Calumet-co ran true to form Tuesday, giving Smith a majority of 862 votes out of a total of 4,772 on returns from 13 of the 15 precincts. The count was: Smith, 2,817; Hoover, 1,955.

Although the county is Republican, the Progressives are in the majority, and it was their vote that gave Smith such a comfortable margin in that territory. Democratic candidates for governor and lieutenant governor also received strong support in the county, although other candidates for state and county offices on the Republican ticket were victorious there.

The gubernatorial race saw Schmiedeman swamping Kohler in the county, the former polling 2,974 votes to 1,512 for the Republican candidate.

Despite the fact that Leo P. Fox, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, lives at Chilton, county seat of Calumet-co, he polled only slightly more than 400 votes more than Huber. The vote was: Fox, 2,423; Huber, 2,007.

Dammann counted 2,485 votes and Muirberger 1,783 for secretary of state.

The vote for other state offices was:

State treasurer—Henry, 1,728; Levitan, 2,530.

Attorney general—Boyle, 1,821; Reynolds, 2,824.

Florlan Lampert scored a one-sided victory over Kelly, his opponent for member of congress, getting 2,572 votes compared to 1,721 for the latter.

Charles A. Barnard defeated Henry Hoffman for member of assembly. Although the count was not completed, his majority is believed to be about 900.

With only one precinct missing in the tabulation for county offices, the results of these races was apparent.

Anthony Madler, Hilbert, defeated George C. Hume, Chilton, by approximately 700 votes for district attorney, it was reported unofficially.

John Brocker was returned to the office of county clerk by a majority of about 1,300. His opponent was Leo P. Dohr.

Defeating W. W. Lauson by approximately 800 votes, Charles Luthier was reelected register of deeds.

William L. Griem was reelected county treasurer, defeating Anton J. Steffes by about 200 votes.

John Diderich, who has held the office of sheriff before was elected to that office again, defeating D. C. Flatley by approximately 500 votes.

The Household Finance Corporation, by reason of large volume of business, efficient management, and favorable credit facilities, attained after fifty years of operation, is now making a very substantial reduction in the cost of loans up to $300.

You can borrow from us for about one-third less than we formerly charged, and about one-third less than the maximum lawful rate. For example, total cost on $50 for one month is $1.25; for five months, paid in five equal monthly payments, is $5.75. All other amounts up to $300 at same proportionate rate.

If you have a loan elsewhere, let us explain our new reduced rate and tell you how much you will save by borrowing from us. You get the money without delay, return it in small monthly payments, arranged to suit your convenience. Each payment of principal reduces the interest.

The other side of an amazing story you may have read in the newspapers — the tremendous true story of a famous star of the stage. Beautiful and alluring, loved by thousands — then shamed, and publicly spurned by the man who did not know he loved her everything!

Loved, until—?

Disgrace! She heard them crying it out in the streets — and she knew that every household was reveling in the news of her shame. For her it was like a city of flames. Where were they now — the men who had adored her, the women who had openly envied her fascination?

But surely, down at the theatre she would find friends — kinder hearts that understood her own, knowing that in her artist's nature there was no middle ground between wisdom and passion.

Yes — one! One friend — her loyal understudy who tells this vivid story. She understood, yet never dreamed what a bitter part she, too, would have to play.

Never dreamed that the brilliant young actor whom she loved, who lashed the ruined actress with terrible insults — was speaking to the woman who loved him, perhaps even more!

And then, swift as an avenger came the astounding climax in the lives of these three, the actress, her understudy, and the man they both loved —

But you must read for yourself this gripping revelation as it is told by the girl who lived through every heart-beat of it! Strange, tangled drama by the greatest playwright of all — Life!

Book Of Knowledge

"Famous First Ladies"

"In case of real danger, fly to the woods with the children," Abigail Adams' husband wrote her. Bravely she went about her daily tasks with an undimmed heart and cool head, the dangers of the Revolution all about her. Pestilence broke out in the neighborhood and entered her home. Although weak herself from illness, she turned her home into a hospital for the stricken ones.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-26.

"I am distressed but not dismayed," she wrote her husband. Before the war was over, John Adams was reunited with his family for a time.

Then he was sent to France as commissioner for the United States, and later went to England as minister. Mrs. Adams joined her husband in London.

When John Adams was elected president, the capital was at Philadelphia, but just at the end of his administration it was moved to Washington. In 1801, Mrs. Adams held the first New Year's reception in the nearly completed "president's mansion." It is said that clothes-lines were strung in one of the unfinished public rooms, and here Mrs. Adams hung her washing.

Practice Vote Is Conducted at School Where Smith Gets 68 Majority

Kaukauna—Students of Kaukauna high school are strong for Smith, according to an election held in the school Tuesday afternoon. Smith polled 203 votes to Hoover's 135. Kohler lost out to Schmiedeman for governor by 61 votes, Schmiedeman having 197 and Kohler 136.

The election was an instructive one as it was conducted exactly as the nation's election was carried on the same day. The classes were divided into precincts as the city is. The seniors were in the first precinct, the juniors in the second precinct, sophomores in the fourth and fifth and the freshmen in the third precinct. Smith carried all the precincts, and the closest Hoover came to winning was in the first precinct, where he lost out by seven votes.

Each precinct had its own voting booth, which was a classroom. Election clerks were appointed for each precinct. As the voters came they were made to register before casting their ballot. After they were checked off they received a ballot and they went into one of the booths. The booths were the window sills. After the ballot was cast, one of the election clerks signed it so there was no chance of a mistake.

The students showed much interest in the election. In the morning political speeches were given by the students. Francis Grogan spoke for Al Smith, Peter Hanson for Hoover and Roland Bayer was Thomas, Socialist candidate for president. Thomas received only two votes in the school.

Women Invade Polls as Workers For 1st Time

Special to Post-Crescent. Forest Junction—The poetic assertion that "a mightier power and stronger, man from his throne has hurled" was given a new interpretation in the town of Brillion, when women, for the first time in the history of the township, occupied a place among the election officials in the general election at the town hall here on Tuesday. The precinct where man had hitherto held undisputed sway was invaded on Tuesday by Misses Arlene Klockin and Violet Thomas, as ballot clerks.

They have the distinction of having been the first of their sex to serve here at an election since the ratification of the nineteenth amendment eight years ago.

A heavy vote was cast. The high mark for the townships of 373 votes in the general election of 1924 was surpassed by a record vote of 458. Of this number, 35 per cent were cast by women. One ballot was cast by mail by an absent voter. The Hoover-Curtis ticket was supported by 290 voters; the Smith-Robinson by 139.

In brief address in connection with an entertainment given at McKinley school, district 7, town of Brillion, Monday evening, Miss Anna E. Barnard, superintendent of Calumet-co. schools, spoke on the value of community gatherings under school auspices, and their beneficial effects upon parents, teachers, and pupils.

The evening's entertainment opened with a program of 15 numbers of dialogues, songs, and recitations by the pupils of their teacher, Miss Helen Flattery. The program lasted an hour and a half and was presented to an audience which filled the schoolroom to overflowing. A lunch sale after the program, combined with other money-raising features, netted a profit of more than $60, which it is planned to spend in the purchase of some musical instrument to replace the discarded organ.

PRESIDENT'S JOB DEFINED ON BASIS USED IN INDUSTRY

Chief Executive of Country Must Have Ability to Pick Men for Appointments

Washington (AP)—What is the president's job? Dr. Charles Riborg Mann, director of the American Council of Education, has defined the job of being chief executive of the United States along the lines evolved by business, industry and the professions for picking men for expert jobs.

At the outset he shows that 40,000 appointments are made by the president, subject to senate approval. These included heads of executive departments, supreme court and federal judges, members of six federal commissions and five federal boards, postmasters and marshals.

According to Dr. Mann's definition, the president must: "Analyze social and economic conditions in the light of his vision and report to congress such facts and tendencies as seem to him significant both of the present state of the Union and of its future development in accordance with his policies."

"Formulate, for consideration of congress, measures that seem to him necessary and expedient for realizing his vision of national achievement in ways that are socially, economically and constitutionally sound; present them so that he secures support for his policies and gets things done."

"Appraise the work of the executive department, as to business efficiency and national service and secure from congress approval of an annual budget that distributes estimated income so to secure team-play and constructive economy in performance of all legitimate and essential federal functions."

"Sign bills that are passed by congress and that seem to him to promote public welfare, sound relationships with the states and his policies of national achievement."

"Veto bills that are passed by congress, but that seem to him socially, economically or constitutionally unsound; submit his reasons therefore in writing to congress."

"Confer with members of congress, representatives of organizations, public officials and private citizens, weigh the evidence and act always in the interest of national achievement as he sees it."

"Formulate an international policy, consistent with national development and stimulating to international good-will; make treaties that are mutually beneficial to all concerned and are acceptable to at least two-thirds of the senate."

"Select and appoint, or with the consent of the senate, ambassadors, ministers and consuls who will creditably represent the United States abroad and sympathetically interpret its international policy."

"Welcome officially all ambassadors and other public ministers from foreign nations."

"Take care that the laws are faithfully and intelligently executed."

"Command the military forces on foot on all officers thereof and direct military operations, as authorized by law, in a manner consistent with his international policy."

Grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States when such action seems justified.

"Modify administrative routine or organization in the executive department by executive order, as authorized by law, to increase efficiency and harmony of federal activity with his policy."

Guide the cabinet in perfecting policies and in other ways and means of realizing them in practice.

"Hold official and public receptions."

"Deliver messages to congress that interpret his vision and his policies to the people."

WILD DEER HAUNTS TERRITORY NEAR FOREST JUNCTION

Forest Junction—Flaunting sportsmen with the security which the game laws afford it, a deer, a splendid antlered specimen, has been frequenting this locality for several days. It has been reported as seen over a large territory by farmers at their work by travelers on roads, and though given chase by the dogs on the farms, it has reappeared after giving a demonstration of its fleet-footedness and "leaping" abilities. Its fearlessness in approaching human habitation has led some to believe that it may be a tame creature escaped from some confinement, while others believe that trees which are at present burning in the swamp area south of the village, have driven it from its accustomed haunts.

NEW FIRST LADY ALWAYS EAGER TO SEEK ADVENTURE

Waterloo, Iowa, Folks Remember Her as "Joan of Arc" in School Pageant

BY SUE McNAMARA (Associated Press Feature Writer)

Waterloo, Ia.—(AP)—Clad in shining armor made of tin discs bought at the local hardware store Lou Henry Hoover, wife of Herbert Hoover, posed as a gallant little Joan of Arc in a school tableau when she was a little girl here.

Always the gallant and the adventurous have appealed to her and she chose the courageous Maid of Orleans from all the characters in history as the one she would like to represent.

People of Waterloo recall Mrs. Hoover as an enthusiastic, unafraid youngster with pig tails flying in the breeze as she coasted down hill or rode horseback. One of the eucalyptus trees she planted when a girl still stands in the dooryard of the old Henry home in Whittier, California. The house the Hoovers occupied in Waterloo has been torn down to make room for city expansion. Charles Henry, father of Mrs. Hoover, was a banker. George E. Lichty, a wholesale grocer of this city, used to haul little Lou Henry from school on his sled in winter and in summer she prevailed on him to let her about in her red toy wagon.

Ten parties and dolls did not play so much of a part in the early life of Lou Henry as did outdoor sports. Her parents heartily approved of her athletic activities and when the family moved to Whittier, California, from Waterloo, they employed a physical instructor to come out from Los Angeles to give their daughter private lessons.

The residents of that town and of Waterloo were not at all surprised to hear that Mrs. Hoover had been made head of the Girl Scouts, knowing her girlhood love of outdoor life. She used to ride horseback and would often shoulder a little rifle and march into the woods hunting for small game.

The life of the youngster who was so fond of adventure swung into strange wide trails when her path crossed that of Herbert Hoover, the young senior at Stanford university and when he left for Australia he and the girl who had studied along

TURKEY TO USE RADIO TO TEACH ALPHABET

The precinct where man had hitherto held undisputed sway was invaded on Tuesday by Misses Arlene Klockin and Violet Thomas, as ballot clerks.

WILD DEER HAUNTS TERRITORY NEAR FOREST JUNCTION

Forest Junction—Flaunting sportsmen with the security which the game laws afford it, a deer, a splendid antlered specimen, has been frequenting this locality for several days. It has been reported as seen over a large territory by farmers at their work by travelers on roads, and though given chase by the dogs on the farms, it has reappeared after giving a demonstration of its fleet-footedness and "leaping" abilities. Its fearlessness in approaching human habitation has led some to believe that it may be a tame creature escaped from some confinement, while others believe that trees which are at present burning in the swamp area south of the village, have driven it from its accustomed haunts.

SCHNEIDER HOLDS SEAT IN CONGRESS BY 14,000 VOTES

Congressman Carries Every County in District in Contest for Re-election

Congressman George J. Schneider, Appleton, easily won reelection to his seat in Congress over Mayor James T. McGillan, his Democrat opponent for election as the Ninth district representative in congress, mounted to over 14,000 votes this afternoon as more returns flowed in from the nine counties in the district. Returns from 210 of the 237 precincts in the district give Schneider 44,088 and McGillan 29,880.

Schneider carried every county in the district, including Brown where his lead was about 800 votes. McGillan, who is mayor of Green Bay, carried Brown outside the city but Schneider led in his home town with a plurality sufficient to wipe out the out-city lead.

Returns were complete from Brown, Door, Florence, Oconto and Outagamie-co and nearly complete from the others.

Schneider's things all his own way in Outagamie-co winning by close to 4,000 votes, leading McGillan in the city and county. McGillan carried only one ward in Appleton, the Third and he lost in Kaukauna, but he carried Little Chute, Kimberly, Buchanan, Vandenberg, Deer Creek and Freedom. Schneider's vote in the county was 13,405 and McGillan received 9,664.

TENOR HAS HAD COLORFUL CAREER

Edward Johnson, Who Will Appear Here Friday, Gets Large Receptions

Edward Johnson, leading tenor of four opera companies who will sing in Appleton Friday evening, has had a career both meteoric and colorful. Whether in opera, oratorio, concert or recital, Mr. Johnson is always met with a tremendous reception, and he is generally acclaimed a consummate master of the art of singing.

Edward Moore of the Chicago Tribune says of Mr. Johnson, "He is a great artist who does not come as often as he should." The New York Evening Journal says of one of his concerts, "The evening was notable for the first appearance here of Edward Johnson as Radames, a revelation in the acting of a role so long merely a matter of wooden gesture. Mr. Johnson's singing of the music had its delights of fitness and restraint."

Mr. Johnson will appear here as the first number of the Community Artist series. Other numbers will be the Toscha Seidel trio, Alexander Brailowsky, world famous pianist; Andree Segovia, the great Spanish guitarist; and Rosa Ponselle, the world's greatest dramatic soprano.

SICILIANS FLEE BEFORE ADVANCE OF LAVA FLOW

Canitania, Sicily—(AP)—A stream of molten lava pouring from Mount Etna Wednesday was sweeping through the town of Maselli and the fertile countryside leaving destruction in its wake.

The lava struck the town of 10,000 inhabitants shortly before 8 o'clock Tuesday night just after the townsfolk had finished celebrating the feast of their patron, Saint Leonardo, whose statue was carried to safety on the shoulders of four old men.

The lava swept into the principal square of the city and then flowed toward the sea, about two and a half miles to the east.

The stream going destroyed numerous gardens, and burned many trees. It flowed over the carriage road near Peidimonte which was choked with vehicles of all descriptions bearing the population to safety. The scene was reminiscent of those in war time when villages near the line of fire were being evacuated.

NEW MEXICO STILL IN DOUBTFUL COLUMB

Santa Fe, N. M.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover got away to an early lead in the election in this state, and although he lead Governor Smith by nearly 5,000 votes, returns were so scattered that the Democratic leaders refused to concede the state's three electoral votes.

With 173 of the state's 779 precincts reported Hoover had 25,574, Smith 19,144 votes. Governor R. C. Dillon lead Bob Dow, the Democratic candidate by about 2,500 votes while U. S. Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican, had a similar margin.

Startling Free Offer to Sufferers from DEAFNESS and Head Noises from Ear Tubal Catarrh of Madison, Wis., writes: "I am extremely grateful for my hearing."

D. B. SIMMONS

Sufferers from deafness will be especially interested to learn that Dr. W. O. Coffee, for many years one of the most widely known specialists in the middle west, originated a treatment, which completely restored his hearing and ended his head noises from ear tubal catarrh.

So effective has this treatment proved in literally thousands of cases, that it will be sent absolutely free, for trial, to the readers of this paper, who are suffering with deafness, dullness of hearing and head noises from ear tubal catarrh or nasal catarrh.

Dr. Coffee restored his own hearing and ended his head noises by this original treatment after he had suffered for years. Many other remedies were tried without avail before he finally originated this treatment that ended his suffering.

During the past three years this Original Home Treatment has been sent to more than 500,000 people afflicted with deafness, dullness of hearing and head noises from ear tubal catarrh and with nasal catarrh; the records of literally hundreds who regained their hearing by his home treatment are now on file here.

or the dry, according to authority, and everyone who suffers in this way is urged to take advantage of this limited free offer. Catarrh may cause indigestion, rheumatism, stomach ills and many other diseases.

And, should deafness or even dullness of hearing develop from the catarrhal condition, the sufferer not only becomes miserably handicapped in a social or business way, but actually runs grave danger of injury because of inability to hear distinctly.

Every sufferer from deafness or head noises from ear tubal catarrh, or from nasal catarrh should test this treatment that has restored hearing to so many people—given them a new interest in life and re-opened to them many opportunities which their affliction had closed.

And remember—these trial treatments are sent absolutely free. So write today, send at once, this notice may not appear again.

Few specialists in the entire United States have had as wonderful experience as did Dr. Coffee, a nationally known figure in the treatment of deafness, head noises and nasal catarrh.

He devoted over 45 years of his life to treating eye, ear, nose and throat diseases. By the use of his perfected home treatment, patients are now able to treat their deafness, head noises and nasal catarrh right in their own home. This has been the means of restoring hearing to thousands.

A great number of people state that they have been deaf or partially so for five, ten and even twenty years, yet their hearing has been restored by Dr. Coffee's famous home treatment. It has banished their deafness and head noises, they say. And in addition to this enviable record. Dr. Coffee freed treatment thousands of people from catarrh, with which they have been burdened.

Those sufferers who are troubled with a mild form of deafness or head noises from ear tubal catarrh and who are hard of hearing in one ear and growing worse with every cold, are especially urged to try this original treatment. These are the cases that as a rule are gradually losing their hearing and this method is designed to restore it.

No money is asked from you for this free trial treatment. It arrives at your home prepaid, with directions as to how it should be used. Is This Your Condition?

He experimented until he found a way that gave him real and actual relief. Afterwards, he treated thousands. Thousands also wrote him, after completing the treatment, thanking him for their recovery; for their absolute freedom from colds, nose and throat discharges; from poisoned systems, foul breath and other disorders attributable to catarrh.

They are now rid of that constant hacking cough—that offensive sniffing and stifling mouth breathing. Rid of all the filthy, dangerous, offensive, disgusting things which accompany a catarrhal condition. They have been freed of that thick, poisonous, disease-bearing mucus.

The presence of that germ-filled, disgusting discharge alone is evidence that something is radically wrong. You should do all you can to fight this condition.

Catarrh Is Dangerous

Dirt and dust from contaminated sections are deposited in the nose and throat with every breath. Much of it finds its way into the mouth, for nasal catarrh causes the disgusting, offensive mouth breathing. The impurities in this filthy

Catarrh Also Offensive

Nasal catarrh is without doubt the most offensive of all diseases; it disgusts and nauseates all who may be within hearing.

The constant hacking, offensive sniffing, and stifling mouth breathing—the mucus discharge, which can only be eliminated by blowing the nose or by continual hacking and spitting, is sickening to all that are near.

Why continue to embarrass your friends, your family and all of those who are close by when Dr. Coffee's treatment has quickly relieved thousands of this dreadful disease?
